5 Senators Map Fight To Take FCA From Wallace

Gillette Is Leader In Move to Restore Its Independence, Wiping Out Merger

Backed by five of the most powerful farm organizations in the Nation, five Democratic Senators joined yesterday to reverse an order of President Roosevelt and restore the Farm Credit Administration to independent status.

Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, announced he and four party colleagues will jointly offer a bill early next week to take from Agriculture Secretary Wallace control of the FCA's $6,000,000,000 credit facilities.

The FCA, only half of the assets of which are outstanding and which has authorization to lend great sums of additional money, was transferred to the Department of Agriculture July 1, last year, by the President's reorganization order. Since that time the former governor, F. F. Hill, two deputy governors and the general counsel have resigned.

"Thoroughly Aroused"

Gillette said the farm organizations are "thoroughly aroused." They are the National Association of Livestock Producers, the Grange, the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Cooperative Council and the National Wool Growers. The Farmers Union, on the other hand, is believed to support the present integration of the FCA in the department.

Gillette said his Democratic cosponsors were Senators Minton, of Indiana, the majority whip; Mead, of New York; Miller of Arkansas, and Hatch, of New Mexico. It was learned that the bill also has the support of the Republican Senate Leader, McNary, of Oregon, and Capper (Republican), of Kansas.

Introduction of the bill is said to be motivated by fear that under the FCA's new governor, Dr. A. G. Black, formerly closely associated with Wallace, "credit would be softened."

Since the FCA's transfer, both Black and Wallace have insisted that sound credit policies would be pursued and that, as a matter of fact, no changes in the FCA's former lending policy were under consideration.

However, Black recently stated that the agency would take "a broad social view" and Wallace indicated that FCA policy would be integrated with the "objectives" of his department.

"Oil and Water" Mixed

Hill's resignation, as well as those of General Counsel Peyton Evans and First Deputy Governor Gerald Lyons, were believed to have been made in protest to the present administration of the agency. The resignation of Land Bank Commissioner Albert Goss also has been demanded, it was reported.

Most of the friction since the transfer, Gillette said, "has come from an attempt to mix oil and water. Farm groups protest that the Secretary wants to mix rural relief with a credit reservoir, or public relief funds with private investment."

The farm organizations' position, as summarized by spokesmen last

WHICH WAS THE GOAT?—Worthowning—a horse owned by Commissioner Allen, but not worth owning in the opinion of Senator Reynolds—and Stablemate Bill. Allen offered the horse to Reynolds but after seeing it the Senator took the goat.

By Charles A. Stofberg
Post Staff Writer

Once upon a time a horse was worth a kingdom, but yesterday Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, decided a goat was even better.

At an uproarious Congressional hearing yesterday, Commissioner George E. Allen, who is opposed to legalizing racing here, but owns a thoroughbred—for some vague reason named Worthowning—offered it to the North Carolina Senator.

The Senator immediately accepted the offer.

But on viewing Worthowning at his stall at Benning, he decided to take his companion, a goat named Bill.

However, Frank E. James, trainer of the race horse, later declared he would double any offer made by Senator Reynolds for either horse or goat.

Trainer of the animal for two years, James said Worthowning is "really a fine race horse, and I'd like to own him."

"I like the goat, too," he added.

Last night the Commissioner had but one comment to make, to wit:

"I should have hidden the goat, then the Senator would have taken the horse."

Senator Reynolds, it is stated,

House Asked To Repeal D.C. Income Tax

Cooley Offers Bill Backed by Nichols; Sales Levy Predicted

Introduction of a bill by Representative Cooley (Democrat), of North Carolina, late yesterday to repeal the District income tax yesterday launched a new campaign on Capitol Hill to revise Washington's badly battered tax structure.

Cooley, who had previously asked the House District Committee to amend the act to exempt residents who pay State income taxes, said he had reached the conclusion that a local income tax will never be successful because of the peculiar political character of the Capital.

"I at first thought it might be revised so as to prevent triple taxation," he said, "but now I am convinced that it just won't work here and that it isn't going to raise sufficient revenue if it stays."

Chairman Nichols, of the House Subcommittee on Fiscal Affairs, immediately announced that he agreed with Cooley and hinted that he has a substitute to offer if the income tax is repealed.

"Cooley's bill simply follows out my own theory that it's impossible to amend the law to make it workable," he said.

Nichols, who voted against the income tax consistently last year, added that an increasing number of members of Congress who favored the legislation last year were chang-

House Group Hears Demands For D. C. Vote

Two Attack Franchise; Nichols to Fight Local Police Control

Demands for local suffrage were interspersed yesterday with expressions of approval of the present form of the District government and a "ribbing" of the Commissioners, as hearings opened at the Capitol on municipal reorganization.

The suffrage pleas received little support from members of the Kennedy subcommittee and brought a statement from Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, that he would insist that the police force remain under the control of Congress and the President, to protect them from possible violence.

"The District was set up originally so that the Federal Government would have a headquarters not subject to the local law enforcement groups of any State," Nichols said in a formal statement.

"It was felt that it would be better to have the Federal Government and its officials within a jurisdiction not subject to police officials or local militia who might harass them, or within the jurisdiction of police officers who might fail and neglect to protect the Congress, the Chief Executive or the executive branches from harassment against mobs and uprisings seeking to influence unduly either

Move Grows to Tone Down 'Prying' Census Questions

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Personal income questions in the 1940 census questionnaire, fanned overnight into a sizzling political issue, may be deleted or toned down to forestall a first-rate campaign row.

Influential Democratic Senators yesterday favored Senate adoption of a modified version of the Tobey resolution calling on the Commerce Department's Census Bureau to eliminate questions on wages from the survey.

Democrats favoring revision of the questions said they were prompted not only by the inflammatory political controversy aroused but by concern lest the row interfere with the taking of the census itself and the legality of the questions.

When a special Senate Commerce subcommittee meets Monday to vote on the resolution by Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, to eliminate the questions, a modified Democratic version of the Tobey resolution is expected to be offered and later submitted to the full committee.

This action may hinge on the nature of a Commerce Department brief to be filed before Monday outlining census powers to ask the question.

If Democratic proponents of the substitute plan remain "unsatisfied" that the census takers have authority from Congress to ask the income questions, under threat of penalty for failure to answer, the Senate may be asked to resolve that the power is lacking.

Hearings were concluded yesterday, after Senator Davis (Republican), of Pennsylvania, charged "a housewife will have to account for her pots and pans," and Senator

U. S. Envoy Sees Hitler Today; Informed Reich Will 'Fight On'

By Otto D. Tolischus.

Berlin, March 1.—All hopes for peace, that may have been attached to the visit of Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles to Europe's warring capitals, turned into dust today in a two and one-half hour conference with Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop.

The American visitor was informed that Germany was determined to continue the war until the power of British "plutocracy" was broken and that the German army was already poised for a "decisive blow that will put in the shade all previous ideas of military penetration power."

Uses "Strongest Terms"

This German determination was conveyed by Von Ribbentro at great length and in the strongest of terms, and is expected to be repeated in greater detail by Chancellor Adolf Hitler, who receives Welles at 11 a. m. tomorrow (5 a. m., E. S. T.).

The American visitor also may expect to hear the same thing from Marshal Hermann Goering, with whom he is scheduled to visit at his Karen Hall estate Sunday.

The German standpoint has been expressed in such strong terms because there is great resentment here that Hitler's last peace offer, on October 6, was interpreted as a sign of weakness. That notion Germany is determined to dispel at all cost, even at the cost of a mighty military blow. Germany is trying to make it clear, beyond any chance of misunderstanding, that she will not make another peace offer.

Peace Results Negative

So far as the informational phase of Welles' trip is concerned, it is proving thus a complete success, for there can not be any doubt in the American statesman's mind where Germany stands. But if it was to be a mission for peace, its results both in Berlin and Rome must be considered negative.

One concrete result that may issue from Welles' visit here is the clarification of German-American relations, now in a state of sus-

Red Steam Roller Reported Rolling Into Outskirts Of Shattered Port

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Saturday), March 2. Soviet troops were advancing into the southern outskirts of Viipuri last night and the Finns were setting fire to the ancient port, the Russian army reported today.

The Leningrad military headquarters communique said the enveloping offensive against Viipuri "continued successfully" from two directions and that five Karelian Isthmus towns were taken during the day along with 922 Finnish fortifications.

The localities reported captured included Heinjoki, about 14 miles east of Viipuri; Paakkolankoski waterfall on the Vuoksi River; Tali, a station on the Viipuri-Serdobol Railway; Capt Keijasniemi, on the western coast of Viipuri Bay, and Mannikkala.

Claim 11 Planes Downed

Eleven Finnish planes were reported downed in combat, bringing to 191 aircraft reported bagged from February 11 to March 1. During this period the Red army said it lost only 21 planes.

In addition, the communique said the Russians captured 506 guns, 2,732 machine guns, 19 tanks, 20,000 shells, 10,000 rifles and more than 14,000,000 cartridges.

Helsinki, March 1.—The Russian steam roller continues to advance northward along practically the entire western half of the Mannerheim belt, between Vuoksi and Viipuri, driving in front of it the numerically inferior, dead-tired Finns, who are desperately resisting, but unable to check the unending wave of men and tanks.

The Finns, so far, have dug in along the railway at Lilmatta and Auratan and on a line running eastward 7 kilometers south of Viipuri and toward Vuoksilake.

Finns Pressed North

Despite the loss of many thousands of men daily and the difficulty of transporting artillery supplies across the newly gained terrain, the Russian offensive is increasing in force.

The Finns have been continuously pressed northward and now are

Ferrara, Once Cuba's Envoy Here, Is Shot by Assassins

Chauffeur Killed As Machine Gun Fires on Diplomat

By the Associated Press

Havana, March 1.—Dr. Orestes Ferrara, member of the Cuban Assembly and former Cuban Ambassador to Washington, was wounded seriously by assailants who fired a fusillade of pistol and machine-gun bullets from an automobile in uptown Havana late today.

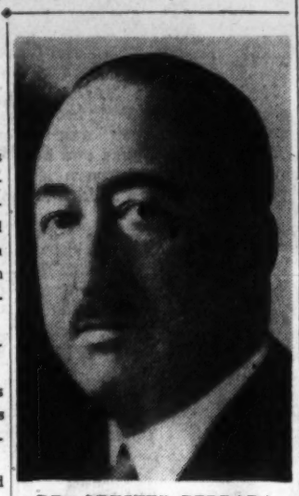

Rufino Alvarez, Ferrara's chauffeur, was killed.

At Emergency Hospital Ferrara's wounds were described as serious but it was said his life was not endangered at the moment.

A pedestrian was run down and injured seriously by the blue automobile in which the assailants fled.

Police said the machine, bearing United States license plates, drew alongside Ferrara's car as it was crossing Infanta street and its occupants started shooting at the former envoy.

Dr. Ferrara, Italian born, has held many official posts in Cuba since he fought for Cuban independence in 1896. He was secretary of state in the regime of President Machado, overthrown in the 1933 revolution, and barely escaped by plane when revolutionists' bullets flew about him. His palace and newspaper office were sacked by a revolutionary mob.

In this country he remained as a voluntary exile, but in 1938 returned to Cuba and became head of the Liberal Party.

Memories of brilliant parties at the embassy while he was here are retained by many in Capital society. Contests in fencing, at which the Ambassador was expert, marked many of his entertainments.

He is known as an epicure, and has written a number of books.

U. S. Rushes Three Destroyers As Southgate Sends S O S

Copyright by New York Times

New York, March 1.—The British freighter Southgate today reported herself attacked by a submarine approximately 175 miles north and east of San Juan, Puerto Rico, and apparently well inside the 300-mile neutrality zone proclaimed by the Panama Conference.

The ship's message was intercepted by Mackay Radio at 6:09 p. m. The Coast Guard cutter Unalga, based at San Juan and cruising on patrol duty immediately was ordered to the position given by the Southgate, 64.00 west, 19.58 north. Three United States destroyers, the McLeish, the Satterlee and the Mason, also headed to the vessel's assistance, the Navy Department announced in Washington.

Foreign Flotilla Reported

The radio report gave no details of the attack, and failed to identify the nationality of the submarine.

More than five hours after the single message from the Southgate was intercepted, no further word had been received from the vessel. Coast Guard headquarters in New York had received no information from the cutter headed to her assistance.

Within the last week, dispatches have reported a squadron of foreign undersea craft operating in Colombian waters. Well informed marine sources claim that for several days a British man of war has been searching Central and South American waters for a flotilla of German submarines believed to be in the area. Neither London nor Berlin, however, had word of the attack tonight.

The Southgate is a 4,862-ton freighter, owned and operated by the Turnbull, Scott Shipping Co., Ltd., of London, flying the British flag and with London as her home port. She was last reported December 1, when she was listed as arriving at Montevideo, after clearing from Buenos Aires November 30.

First Since Early in War

The attack was the first made by a submarine off the American coast since early in the war, when, on September 15 the Navy Station at Norfolk, Va., picked up radio signals from an unidentified ship sinking after being shelled by a submarine. The signals were of such intensity that it was believed the vessel was not far off shore.

Announcement that the three destroyers were headed to the scene of the purported attack was made by Lieut. Comdr. L. B. Austin, in charge of press relations of the Navy Department. He was unable to give the position of these vessels. The cutter Unalga was said to be within ten hours of the British freighter.

The position given by the Southgate tallies closely with the spot where the German pocket battleship Deutschland early in the war sank the British ship Stonegate, whose crew was rescued by the American City of Flint, later captured by the same German vessel.

"New Wave" of U-Boats

The waters in which the Southgate reported the attack were visited by President Roosevelt on his vacation cruise, from which he was returning tonight.

On January 28, the French high command reported a "new wave" of German submarines, preying on shipping. Earlier reports indicated Berlin was constructing "vest pocket" submarines for nearby waters, presumably releasing larger craft to cruise further afield.

Not Beaten Yet, Procope Says Of Finland

Minister Sees Problem One of Holding On Till Help Arrives

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Hjalmar J. Procope, the Finnish Minister, told newspapermen yesterday that Finland was determined to "fight on" against Russia, notwithstanding the relentless drive of the Red army. The most difficult terrain for the Russians, he said, lies ahead.

It was the first time Minister Procope had held a press conference since the early days of the Russian invasion. As he stood before a war map within the ivy-covered legation on Tracy place, he seemed to be unusually optimistic.

He had been talked by the transatlantic telephone to Prime Minister Ryti, of Finland.

"He told me," Minister Procope said, "that Viipuri still is in our hands.

"When I first held a press conference here after my country was invaded, I am sure that most of you were convinced that Finland would be beaten in a few days.

"Now we have held the enemy for three months. We are going to fight on. And we are going to continue to hold the enemy, because help must surely come.

"Please remember this, that most

Nazi Planes Attack Convoy; 3 Ships Sunk

British Aviators Make Scout Flights Over German Cities

By Frank R. Kelley.

London, March 1.—After a brief lull the war in the air and at sea flared up today as German planes, apparently celebrating the fifth anniversary of the Nazi air fleet, crossed the North Sea in brilliant sunshine to bomb and machine-gun British trawlers, a British convoy and two neutral freighters.

British bombers had returned safely from the most extensive series of scouting flights over Germany since the outbreak of war a few hours before the German attack.

Nazi raiders flew up the Thames estuary this morning and again just before sunset, through a barrage of antiaircraft fire which eventually forced them to flee homeward.

Guns Heard in London

Heavy gunfire was heard clearly in central London this morning, but later it was announced that the sound had been caused by the testing of guns at Woolwich Arsenal, in the southeastern reaches of the city, and the air ministry denied categorically that enemy planes had been active along the Thames during the day.

From several sources, however, reports reached London that resi-

Betsey Roosevelt Tells Court Of Break With 'Son Jimmy'

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Calif., March 1.—Betsey Cushing Roosevelt, without opposition from her film-producer husband, James, went to court today to seek a divorce under which she may receive $65,000 immediately and $50,000, if she wants it, five years hence.

She testified that relations had been strained between her and the President's eldest son since he first asked for his freedom in May, 1938.

After hearing her, the judge set the case over until Monday so her brother, Henry K. Cushing, stricken suddenly ill, could appear.

In October, 1938, Mrs. Roosevelt related, her husband left their home in the East and came to California without asking her to accompany him. She followed a month later, then:

"He said he wanted a divorce and asked me to leave California."

This she did, she told the court, "as I thought it was best for the children." She never was asked to return, she added. They were married June 6, 1930.

Terms of a property settlement made out of court give Mrs. Roosevelt sole custody of their two children, Sara Delano, 7, and Kate, 4, although the father will be permitted to confer on such matters as education. It provides $167.50 a month for each until they are 12, then $250 a month.

It also gives them 2 per cent of their father's income above $50,000 in 1940-43, inclusive, and 5 per cent in 1944 and thereafter.

Provision was made for payments of $1,500 to Mrs. Roosevelt January 7 and February 7 and $65,000 today. At the end of five years, if she is alive and unmarried, she will receive $50,000 cash, or $5,000 a year for life. Roosevelt agreed to take

Thorp Given Associated Gas Trusteeship

Hopkins Adviser, Dennis J. Driscoll, W. H. Pollak Named

By the Associated Press

New York, March 1.—Two men who have had a hand in Washington affairs in recent years were named today among a trio of trustees for the reorganization of the vast Associated Gas & Electric system.

Ending a battle over selection of trustees to direct revamping of the billion-dollar utility holding setup, Federal Judge Vincent Leibell appointed the following:

Denis J. Driscoll, of St. Marys, Pa., chairman of the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission and former Congressman credited in utility circles with having had an important part in the passage of the 1935 Federal Utility Holding Company Act.

Willard L. Thorp, New York economist and special adviser to Secretary of Commerce Hopkins. He is known to many as a conservative New Dealer.

Walter H. Pollak, attorney, of New York, who has served as referee in litigation over New York City traction properties.

Work Is Divided

Driscoll and Thorp were selected as trustees for the Associated Gas & Electric Corporation, rated the more important of the two top units of the complex structure.

Pollak was assigned to the Associated Gas & Electric Co., top-ranking holding concern in the pyramid of properties built up by Howard C. Hopson.

Announcement of the trustees was a surprise to most utility men. They saw a minor storm kicked up in Washington over proposals to have the SEC handle the job or to turn it over to John W. Hanes, Wall street broker who became a member of the Securities and Exchange Commission and then Undersecretary of the Treasury.

Judge Leibell said the SEC had approved the selections.

Exposed Telegrams

Some power executives recalled Driscoll exposed falsely signed telegrams sent to influence the Congressional vote when Associated Gas' creator, Hopson, strenuously fought the Holding Company Act and its so-called "death sentence," providing for simplification of power systems.

Exposure of the telegrams was considered a strategic move in the final vote on the bill. Later, Driscoll was defeated for reelection as Congressman from the St. Mary's district and then was named to the utility commission in Pennsylvania.

Thorp, formerly director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, is in charge of research for Dun & Bradstreet, mercantile agency.

The trio will have direct rearrangement of the financial structure covering properties serving 6,200 communities in many States.

New Deal chiefs interested in the administration of the holding company law were reported in favor of men who did not carry the Wall street label, and were without ties to utility financial interests.

Associated Gas went into the courts for reorganization after the Securities Commission stopped the income flow to the top units.

Selections Satisfy SEC

Members of the SEC last night expressed satisfaction with the trustee appointments for Associated Gas & Electric Co and Associated Gas and Electric Corporation.

It was emphasized here that the SEC did not suggest Willard L. Thorp, Denis J. Driscoll and Walter H. Pollak for the posts, but the commission did pass on the selections. Judge Leibell consulted the SEC on the appointments as is required by law.

Senators to Seek Independent FCA

night, was that the whole cooperative nature of the FCA credit system meant that farmers had a stake in the soundness of FCA debentures, in which they have invested $130,000,000.

Political Possibilities Cited

Anything that "softens" FCA credit endangers these securities, and an attempt to mix two types of loans—the "sound business risk" type of FCA lending and the "emergency" type of crop and seed and Farm Security Administration loans—would be certain to result in "softening", it was said.

The spokesmen added that, first, the "general philosophy" of Agriculture Department officers and, second, certain recent statements that farmers in difficulty would not be pressed to repay obligations, evoked fears that FCA policy would be changed.

They said that the statements would have the effect of stopping further payments on FCA loans by making farmers believe no repayments would be demanded.

Farm organizations were reported to believe also that the agency's lending power would be put to political uses. It was pointed out that credit is a powerful weapon to hold over a farmer and that conditions for receiving a loan should not be based on compliance with any other farm program, "which at best has an element of politics in it."

Aboard Roosevelt Train en Route to Washington, March 1.—President Roosevelt signed tonight an authorization for John Carmody, Federal Works administrator, to use $130,000 for work relief for persons in need because of floods in northern California.

He also signed a resolution appropriating an additional $1,500,000 for expenditure before June 30 in paying claims resulting from the death or disability of persons employed on emergency relief projects. The $3,200,000 originally appropriated for the purpose for the current fiscal year was insufficient.

The authorization and resolution were flown from Washington to Pensacola, Fla.

Pensacola, Fla., March 1 (INS).—President Roosevelt tonight completed his 15-day, 4,000-mile inspection cruise of Panama Canal defenses.

The Presidential flotilla, consisting of the U. S. S. Tuscaloosa, Lang and Jouett, had been forced to anchor well out in the channel for seven hours waiting for a fog to lift.

Visibility continued at zero, however, and finally Commander Felix Johnson of the Lang took his ship smartly alongside the Tuscaloosa, guided only by the bell on the cruiser's fore deck.

The President transferred to the Lang, which then ran cautiously through the fog to the naval dock. Crowds cheered the President as he motored swiftly to the railroad station.

British Bar U.S. Oil for Danes, Dutch, Belgians

Embassy Says Allies Believe Big Shipments Are for Nazi Account

By Walter Fitzmaurice

International News Service Staff Writer

The British government has informed the 40 principal American oil exporters it will grant no more navicerts under present circumstances for shipment of lubricating oil to the Netherlands, Belgium and Denmark, official quarters disclosed yesterday.

Effect of the notice is to suspend shipments to the three countries. Without navicerts or certificates clearing goods through Allied contraband control stations, they may be seized for disposition by British prize courts.

The British notice, circulated by its embassy in Washington, stated that Dutch, Belgian and Danish stocks of lubricating oil had attained abnormally high proportions since outbreak of the European war.

The supposition of the Allied economic war ministries, the notice added was that part of the stocks were for the account of Germany.

Imposition of the lubricating oil ban marks the first direct impact upon American shippers of the Allied system of rationing imports of neutral nations to prevent building up of surpluses for Germany.

The State Department has challenged the legality of allied interference with the commerce between the United States and European neutrals, but the British have shown no disposition to yield.

Secretary Hull yesterday told his press conference the department was giving constant attention to an adjustment with the British and French of the controversy arising from stoppage of American exports to neutrals and extension of the blockade to exports flowing from Germany to the United States.

The secretary said the oil ban had not been called to his attention, however.

Shipments of American lubricants for 1939 to the Netherlands totaled 269,403 barrels; Belgium, 827,806 barrels, and Denmark, 315,431 barrels.

Shipments to each of the three countries from September through December totaled: The Netherlands, 141,833 barrels; Belgium, 324,673 barrels; Denmark, 296,715 barrels.

Total shipments to all three countries in 1938 were only 121,528 barrels.

Rist and Gwatkin will make the trip to the United States aboard the S. S. George Washington.

Caldwell, Whose Hero Shouted '!! . . . !!,' Speaks Gently Here

Fantastically, almost, the creator of one of the world's glibbest and most picturesque cussers and talkers professed himself yesterday to be a faltering man with the spoken word.

CALDWELL

And the spoken words of Erskine Caldwell came so mildly and with such gentle, almost self-conscious inflection that he stood there, tall, deliberating for moments on words.

And Caldwell, sitting above a typewriter somewhere once, had made old Jeter Lester to shout, "Well, by . . . !!*x! !"

He had created a character then, and some since, exactly unlike himself. Caldwell is withdrawing and withdrawn. He gives the impression of being a man without a thing in this world to sell anybody.

He answers questions politely, but isn't looking for a stump to elaborate from. He said, to a question, that the like of Jeter Lester couldn't be saved by a $10 handout or any other such superficial handling. But the children of old Jeter and his like have promise. Speaking to the United Federal Workers Lodge in the Library of Congress Coolidge Auditorium, Caldwell ventured that the writing of books is supposed to carry much glory. He said he hadn't got much. He spoke of trying to appeal to the great mass of potential readers, and the gamble of it, with the observation that a writer maybe should only try to please his own idea and himself.

Here with Caldwell was C. Hall well Duell, of his publishing house. Caldwell spoke last night on "Folklore and Literature" at the Bookshop, and autographed copies of his new book, "Trouble in July."

Probers Seek Unanimous NLRB Report

Smith Committee Studying Several Wagner Act Changes

By John B. Oakes.
Post Staff Writer

The Smith committee investigating the National Labor Relations Board is making "every effort to reach a unanimous decision" on its preliminary report, Chairman Howard Smith, of Virginia, said yesterday.

Issuance of the report, which will propose amendments to the Wagner Act, is expected within a few days, but Chairman Smith said yesterday that, thus far, "no decision" has been reached regarding any specific amendment.

As reported in yesterday's Post, the committee is understood to be giving "favorable consideration"—without having yet reached a decision—to a number of changes in the Wagner Act, including the establishment of an independent prosecuting division in the Labor Board to separate the board's "judicial" from its "prosecuting" functions.

Several Changes Studied

Other likely changes include amendments relieving the board of the necessity of acting in A. F. of L.-C. I. O. disputes; permitting the board to order not more than six months' back pay to reinstated employes; reorganizing the present three-man board, and restricting operation of the act in respect to aliens.

Chairman Smith yesterday said that "any newspaper publications as to what the report of the committee may be are purely speculative."

"The committee," he said, "has had under consideration and brought to its attention from various sources, a very large number of proposed amendments, all of which are still under consideration."

The chairman's statement emphasizde that "the deliberations of the committee have been entirely harmonious and continue to be so."

The report is expected to carry considerable weight in Congress, and its publication will accentuate a row now brewing in the House Labor Committee, to which the Smith recommendations must be referred.

Await Complete Report

This committee will conclude its own hearings on proposed amendments to the Wagner Act next week, but its chairman, Representative Norton, of New Jersey, has stated that she does not wish to begin actual work on amendments to the law until the final Smith report is issued—presumably some time next summer.

On the other hand, Representative Ramspeck, of Georgia, ranking Democrat on the Labor Committee, declared that, at conclusion of hearings next week, he would press for immediate action on proposed amendments, without waiting for the final Smith report.

D. C. Income Tax Repeal Is Sought

Sales Tax Predicted

The whole tax question will be reopened when the subcommittee tackles the problems raised by the Capitol Hill attacks on the bill, Nichols said.

A revival of the Pond formula of an income tax beginning at $10,000 or $14,000 coupled with a sales tax to catch low-salaried residents was predicted by Cooley when asked whether he had any suggestion as to what tax should be substituted if the income levy is repealed.

Nichols is known to still favor this plan despite its rejection last year by the House.

3 to 2 for Income Tax

Repeal of the income tax law, however, will run into difficulties at the outset because of the present membership of the Fiscal Affairs Subcommittee.

The addition of Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, last week made the line-up of income tax and sales tax proponents 3 to 2.

The two minority members of the subcommittee, Representatives Dirksen, of Illinois, and Bates, of Massachusetts, are authors of the present tax. The other member, Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, is a sales tax advocate.

The full District Committee membership has more sales tax advocates on it, but last year the committee flatly rejected a sales tax although it accepted the Pond formula.

Officials' Alarmed

With the approach of the April 15 filing date for local income tax returns, more demands are expected to be made upon the District Committee for revision of the law, if not repeal. Chairman Randolph last District day promised prompt action.

District officials have shown alarm at the current attacks on the Income Tax Act. Amendments relieving thousands of residents with State allegiances would produce a deficit in District finances, they said.

Cooley yesterday criticized the ruling of Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal as to the applicability of the District levy.

"Under his ruling all the high salaried officials in the Federal Government won't have to pay the tax," he said, "whereas their underpaid subordinates will have to pay the District and probably their home State as well."

Seal ruled that Government officials appointed for a definite term are not held to be domiciled in the National Capital.

Shafer Plans Move to Kill ABC Report

Subcommittee Probe Violates House Rules, Says Congressman

Representative Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, yesterday said he would move to table any report that is filed by the special House subcommittee investigating local liquor licensing, on the ground that the inquiry had not been ordered in conformance with the rules of the House.

"As I understand the House rules," he said, "a subcommittee cannot act as an inquisitorial body without specific authority from the House. The members of the committee must then be appointed by the Speaker."

Chairman Eberharter, who clashed with Shafer Thursday over the procedure in the inquiry, indicated the hearings will be continued unless the majority of the subcommittee decides to drop the investigation.

Executive Session Next Week

He said an executive session will be called early next week when all members are in the city.

"I think that if Mr. Shafer's interpretation of the House rules were adopted," he said, "the House District Committee could conduct no investigations."

Eberharter said that he had read the minutes of the District Committee meeting at which the inquiry was ordered, and found that the motion of Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, was broad enough to cover a general investigation of practices of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

He said he has a number of witnesses who wish to be heard if the inquiry is resumed.

Kennedy Prepares Statement

Representative Kennedy is preparing a statement to explain his connection with the case of Leo Rossiter, he said, as a result of a statement made by Shafer that "a Maryland Congressman" started the investigation in the interest of a Baltimore constituent.

Kennedy pointed out that he at no time exerted any pressure on the ABC Board in the interest of any lincensee or applicant for a license.

Allen Offers Nag; Goat Is Preferred

has not decided what to do with the billygoat. Someone suggested he could send it to the Naval Academy as a sort of assistant mascot.

Appearing at the hearing yesterday also was Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, well known for his love of horses and owner of a breeding farm in Virginia. He owned Worth owning in the first place. As the story goes, the deal for the change of ownership was made during a race at the Marlboro track, when Worthowning was nowhere in sight, but he pulled up to win the purse for Allen. The horse is registered in the name of the Commissioner's wife, Mary Allen, for whom Hazen once named a horse.

Hazen explained at the hearing that he opposed a local racing bill several years ago when the public sentiment was strong against such a proposal.

Allen "Loves Racing"

It was at this point Senator Reynolds, who is the sponsor of the bill, asked the Commissioner for his personal view of the sport. Commissioner Allen came to the rescue stating he and Hazen were perhaps a "little vulnerable" and explained:

"I love racing and I own a horse that I'd be glad to give you, Senator——"

And before he could continue, Reynolds accepted the offer. Allen said he would like to see Reynolds jockey the horse and added:

"I think racing is bad for me—bad for anybody—and I don't think my stupidity should be forced upon residents of the District."

Senators Reynolds and Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, questioned Allen on the revenue the District would get from 54 days of racing annually.

"If it's revenue you want, you ought to add dog races at night and a lottery during the week," Allen answered.

Citizen Groups Divided

Miss Etta L. Taggart, representing The Washingtonians; Mrs. Elizabeth T. Sullivan, of the Georgetown Progressive Citizens Association, and Mrs. Margaret H. Worrell, of Columbia Heights Citizens Association, all spoke in favor of the proposal.

Opposing the measure were William L. Ford, of the Columbia Heights Citizens; Evan H. Tucker, veteran civic spokesman, and Mrs. Lester Buchanan.

Jackson Denies Charges FBI 'Overstepped' Authority

Detroit Accusations Unjustified, Attorney General Writes Norris; In Agreement With Hoover, He Says

Attorney General Jackson yesterday defended the Federal Bureau of Investigation against charges that it had been guilty of "inhuman and brutal treatment of prisoners, and of overstepping its authority in making investigations.

In a letter to Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, he said J. Edgar Hoover, director of the bureau, was in agreement with him that the activities of the bureau should be confined strictly to the purposes for which it was created.

Detroit Arrests Cited

Norris, in a letter to Jackson, had complained in particular about reports of humiliating treatment by the G-men of 16 persons arrested in Detroit for inducing the enlistment of volunteers to serve in the Spanish Loyalist army.

These cases were initiated by former Attorney General Murphy before his appointment to the Supreme Court. Jackson, on February 16, ordered indictments in the cases dismissed.

This action was interpreted as evidence of a sharp conflict between Murphy and Jackson, his predecessor, with regard to matters of departmental policy.

In commenting on the Detroit arrests, Jackson apparently referred to Murphy when he said warrants for the arrests were given to the FBI "under circumstances which warranted the impression that their service was of the utmost importance and immediacy."

Charges "Unjustified"

After investigation, he declared, he found "nothing to justify any charge of misconduct" against the FBI in its treatment of the Detroit prisoners.

Norris had said charges were made that the prisoners were "arrested and handcuffed together, and their pictures taken in this condition." He regarded such treatment as "indefensible."

Jackson explained that the work of the G-men had expanded as a result of Congressional action, the outbreak of war, and demands for Federal intervention in local affairs.

One of the first things he did on assuming the Attorney Generalship, he said, was to review the work of the FBI with Hoover. The latter, he declared, agreed with him that the principles which Justice Stone of the Supreme Court, then Attorney General, laid down in 1924 should be followed by the FBI. These principles, which Norris had recalled, were mainly that the FBI was concerned with the conduct of individuals only when "such conduct is forbidden by the laws of the United States."

U. S. Urged To Force Labor Act on Shippers

Maritime Board Favors Subsidy Club To Get Compliance

By the United Press

The Maritime Labor Board yesterday urged President Roosevelt and Congress to deny Federal subsidies to shipowners who do not comply with the Wagner Labor Act, and recommended that American seamen be given the right to strike when their ships are in domestic harbors.

The board, created as a special agency, also suggested that its life be continued indefinitely beyond the scheduled expiration date of June 23, 1941. As an alternative, it recommended that a new specialized maritime board be established to encourage voluntary mediation in marine labor disputes.

Signed Contracts Sought

The object of such a board, the report stated, would be to bring about signed contracts between seamen and their employers regarding wages, hours and working conditions.

Several of the board's recommendations run counter to the policy established by the United States Maritime Commission and are expected to arouse controversy if and when an attempt is made to enact them.

The 627-page report was submitted by Chairman Robert W. Bruere, Louis Bloch and Claude E. Seehorn.

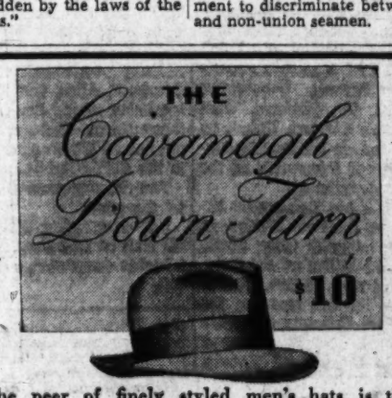

One of the board's most explosive requests was that Congress require the Maritime Commission to permit collective bargaining among seamen on Government-owned merchant ships operated by agents or corporations on behalf of the commission itself.

Union Stand Cited

Failure of the commission to permit such bargaining has been interpreted by maritime labor unions as an attempt to "break down collective bargaining aboard merchant vessels in general and to do away with union hiring halls," the board said.

When the issue was raised on previous occasions, the commission contended that workers on its ships are "Government employes" and that it is impossible for the Government to discriminate between union and non-union seamen.

Long Orders Session to Strip Jones of Power

Legislature Ignores First Call, Is Told To Meet Today

By the Associated Press

Baton Rouge, La., March 1.—Legislation which would strip Governor-designate Sam H. Jones' new administration of important prosecution powers was proposed tonight by Gov. Earl K. Long in his call for a special session of the Legislature at 8 a. m. tomorrow.

The call was issued tonight after a call for this afternoon failed when insufficient legislators appeared to make a quorum.

Long's call for the six-day session asked the hitherto docile Legislature to repeal broad prosecution powers conferred on the attorney general under some of the Huey P. Long laws.

Eugene Stanley, nominated for the attorney generalship on the Jones ticket and sure to win the general election, is an avowed enemy of Long.

The call, ignoring consideration of social security and free school lunch appropriations for which Long had said earlier he needed the session, indicated the proposed session was aimed largely at Stanley, who has threatened prosecution of Mayor Robert S. Maestri of New Orleans, an administration prop, and of any official who may have been guilty of State law violations in the 12-year tenure of "Longism."

An hour after the time fixed for today's session not a member had taken his seat. Galleries were packed.

Swiss Look to Greenbelt For Instruction on Cheese

Research Center Develops Bigger Holes, U. S. Experts Testify, and America Rivals Alp Country in Quality Product

The Swiss, renowed throughout the world for their ability to make cheese with bona fide air spaces, are getting bigger and better holes in their product as a result of cultures developed here by the Agriculture Department, it was learned yesterday.

O. E. Reed, chief of the Department's Bureau of Dairy Industry, confirmed reports recently circulated in Congress that Swiss cheesemakers had obtained and were using department cultures.

He would not say, however, that Swiss cheese made at the research center at Beltsville, said to be of such high quality as to induce some Republican members of Congress to exempt the center from their economy drive, was the best in the world. It is simply as good, he declared, as the best Swiss cheese made in Switzerland.

The Department, he said, has swapped cultures with Swiss scientists. Thus, the Swiss have paid for cultures obtained from this country with cultures which they developed. This form of international cooperation, the net result of which is better Swiss cheese on both sides of the Atlantic, has not been affected by the war, Reed declared.

"Our chief aim," Reed said, "is to bring all Swiss cheese made in the country up to the highest standards. The Swiss make as much poor cheese as we do, but only the best is sent here."

Swiss cheese is made in this country in three Swiss colonies in Ohio, Wisconsin and Idaho. Department laboratory trucks go from plant to plant showing the cheese makers how to improve the quality of their product.

Yarnell Doubts Japan Embargo Would Mean War

By the Associated Press

Rear Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, retired, former commander of the Asiatic Fleet, expressed the opinion yesterday that an embargo on exports to Japan would not result in hostilities against the United States.

"It would be suicidal for Japan to engage in another major war with a powerful enemy," Yarnell wrote Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington.

"As for our interests in the Far East, the question arises whether our Nation can afford to see the domination of that great area by a power inspired by the ideals of fire and sword."

The charges included 5 counts of robbery, 6 of assault with intent to rob, 11 of housebreaking and 4 of larceny.

Martin is due to be sentenced Friday.

She married Stage at New York City December 12, 1929, and charged cruelty in winning the uncontested divorce.

Town Hall Lecturer Likens Subconscious Mind to Radio

A fashionably-dressed audience in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel was startled yesterday to hear a lecturer announce, "I am going to treat you all as if you were ghosts."

Just how you treat somebody as if he were a ghost never really developed, however, since Dr. Louis Anspacher, author and lecturer on the world of the subconscious, merely went on to describe in an even voice several psychic phenomena.

He told about the young man of Newcastle, England, who apparently walked into a photographer's shop shortly after his death.

He also mentioned a girl named Bertha, whose body was found in a lake near her home in Enfield, N. H. A diver was directed to the exact spot, Dr. Anspacher said, by a woman who lived 5 miles away, had never known Betrha but had seen the whole thing in a dream the night before.

Dr. Anspacher spoke to 300 women and a dozen men at the Friday Morning Series of the Town Hall. He confessed he had no explanation for manifestations of the subconscious mind but insisted he is no worse off "than scientists in other fields."

Physicists "cannot tell us what electricity is," he asserted. "Who can say how a blade of grass grows? Who knows what life is?"

The lecturer likened the subconscious mind to radio, while the conscious mind, like the telephone, operates with "visible conduits."

There is nothing "supernatural" about the workings of the subconscious, he said. "We are simply discovering that nature has many dimensions."

The great geniuses of literature and music have been distinguished by ability to draw freely on their "psyches," he contended, while their art enables the reader or listener to tap his own subconscious.

"There is great wisdom in sleeping on a difficult problem," Dr. Anspacher advised his listeners, "because the subconscious mind helps mature the decision, while the five-senses mind is lulled."

California Flood Crisis Passes; Toll 5

Sacramento Falling; One Woman Drowned In Break at Meridian

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, March 1.—Although water still poured through broken dikes tonight and hundreds of thousands of acres of rich farm lands remained submerged, the crisis appeared passed in northern California's devastating flood.

Damage will be reckoned in millions of dollars, but loss of life among the 5,000 or more flood victims was no more than five tonight.

"It looks like the crisis has passed," the Weather Bureau reported, "although the water may rise in the lowest part of the Sacramento Valley for the next 24 hours." Cool, dry weather in the mountains was most favorable.

The town of Meridian, 40 miles north of Sacramento, became the crisis center today as levees breached, unloosing a torrent on 70,000 acres of crops and forcing hundreds of families to vacate their homes. The town was isolated.

One woman was drowned when an automobile was trapped and overturned in the flood as she and her family fled to higher ground. She was Mrs. Frank Fleharty, 52. Four others in the party were rescued after clinging six hours to the branches of a tree. The woman's husband, saved by another motorist, had sent the rescue party out to search for his family.

The breaking of the levee at Meridian took pressure off the river at nearby Colusa, where the situation was becoming critical.

Tonight the Sacramento River and its tributaries were dropping slowly but steadily. Other dikes were higher than the flood danger mark and appeared to be holding safely.

Jackson Suspends Parole Examiner Picked by Murphy

The Justice Department announced yesterday that Joel Moore, parole examiner in the Department and an appointee of former Attorney General Murphy, had been suspended for "conduct prejudicial to the service."

Moore refused to comment.

The department said Moore had sent a letter to Federal judges soliciting their indorsement for the job of supervisor of probation in the office of the administrator for Federal courts. This action was described as "a reflection on the department's parole work."

Moore, formerly employed in the Department's Bureau of Prisons, was made warden of the Michigan State Penitentiary at Jackson by Murphy, who, after his appointment as Attorney General brought Moore here as one of the department's two parole examiners. Murphy recently was elevated to the Supreme Court.

Low Bid Received For Airport Roads

The Warner Bros. Roads Co., of Cambridge, Mass., has submitted the low bid for 800,000 square yards of paving at Gravelly Point Airport, it was announced yesterday by Col. R. S. Thomas, of the United States Engineer Office. The bid was $211,000.

Officials of the CAA and War Department must approve the bid before the contract is awarded. Paving is expected to begin early in April, Col. Thomas said.

Taft Says 'Pinks' Discourage Trade

Wilmington, Del., March 1 (AP).—Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, asserted tonight that "sympathy for Communist ideals" dominated many Administration bureaus and was leading to "more and more regulation of business and taxation of success."

The result, he told a Lions Club meeting here, is to discourage men from starting new enterprises and to destroy, or check the growth, of existing businesses.

Beverly Hills, Calif., March 1 (AP).—Two youths arrested in a parked car near the home of Radio Comedian Jack Benny and his wife, Mary Livingston, were quoted today by Police Chief W. W. White as confessing a plot to hold up the radio stars.

White identified the youths as Thomas Anthony Adams, 20, and Paul Lawrence McCarthy, both of Chicago.

The officer said he found guns, handkerchief masks and adhesive tape in their car.

Tribute Paid Carl Schurz, Reich-Born Cabinet Member

Former Secretary of Interior Under Hayes Honored by Delegation Which Works To Protect Naturalized Americans

The memory of Carl Schurz, German refugee who became Secretary of the Interior in President Hayes' Cabinet, was honored yesterday in ceremonies at the Interior Department.

Under a portrait of Schurz, near the Secretary's office, Undersecretary of the Interior A. J. Wirtz greeted a delegation from the American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born.

Envoy to Spain

Wirtz told the delegation "we all are happy to have our citizens recognize and keep green the memory of a patriot such as Schurz." Heading the delegation were Abner Green, of the committee, and Susan B. Anthony 2d, grandniece of the famous suffrage leader.

Schurz came to America at 23, and for many years was active in politics, and in newspaper work. He campaigned for Lincoln, and later served as American Ambassador to Spain.

His life will be discussed by Dr. Frank Bohn, of Washington, today in the opening session of the committee's fourth conference, at 2 p. m. in the Annapolis Hotel.

For Valor

Bomber Pilot Wins Heroism Trophy

The Army Air Corps 1939 award for valor goes to a pilot who risked his life landing a disabled bomber in the mistaken belief he had a helpless passenger aboard.

NEELY

"Hero of the year" is First Lieut. Harold L. Neely, stationed at Lowry Field, Denver, Colo. Announcement of his selection for the Cheney Award, presented annually for the outstanding act of valor in connection with aviation, was made yesterday by Acting Secretary of War Louis Johnson.

President Roosevelt is expected to present the trophy to Neely at a date to be arranged.

Lieut. Neely was piloting an Army bomber at about 11,000 feet above a thick dust storm near Hill City, Kans., last December 18, when both engines stopped. He directed his three passengers to jump with their parachutes. They did, but seeing only two 'chutes clear the plane, Neely decided to attempt a forced landing rather than jump himself and possibly leave the third man to ride to his death. His successful landing was termed "miraculous" by the War Department.

Man Indicted For Evading Million Taxes

U. S. Says Chicagoan Owes $2,232,497 Penalties Included

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 1.—William R. Johnson, described by the district attorney as a top man in Chicago's gambling syndicate, was indicted by a Federal grand jury today on a charge of attempting to avoid payment of $2,232,497.41 in income, tax, penalties and interest for 1936 to 1938, inclusive.

The indictment, the fourth returned by the special Federal jury inquiring into incomes of alleged big-shot gamblers in the Chicago area, charged Johnson evaded a tax of $1,389,919.98 and added penalties and interest of $842,577.43.

The indictment contained three counts, each carrying a maximum penalty of five years' imprisonment and a $10,000 fine. Judge Charles E. Woodward set bond at $50,000.

Further developments in the investigation of income taxes were hinted by District Attorney William J. Campbell when he said:

"The work of the grand jury is by no means completed."

Government investigators said that Johnson rose from driving an express wagon to become the affluent owner of "a baronial estate," named Sunny Acres, at Glen Ellyn, Ill.

The case against Johnson is the second largest personal income tax action in the history of the Internal Revenue Department, Campbell said. The largest is that pending against M. L. Annenberg, Philadelphia publisher of numerous horse race information sheets. The Government's bill against Annenberg is for $5,548,884, including penalties and interest for 1932 to 1936, inclusive.

Curb on Finn Loan Attacked By Dr. Walsh

Restrictions 'Premium On Criminality' Priest Declares

The Rev. Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president of Georgetown University and regent of its School of Foreign Service, last night characterized America's restricted loan to Finland as placing "a premium on criminality."

The $20,000,000 loan, under the terms set by Congress, may be used to purchase nonmilitary supplies only.

Dr. Walsh, speaking before a Memorial Continental Hall audience in his weekly lecture on American diplomacy, declared:

"Finland, as a sovereign state which has never defaulted in its obligations to the Government of the United States, has, in effect, been penalized in the exercise of her sovereignty. Not a belligerent, and so regarded by the United States, it would seem that she has every right to use any loan granted, for purposes within her own determination.

"The interpretation followed by the Congress, for reasons which I appreciate and understand, but do not share, puts a premium on the very criminality which Senators and Representatives in their personal capacity have vociferously denounced."

Firm resistance on the part of Finland, asserted Father Walsh, blocked the program of expansion in Scandinavia and the Balkans, through occupation or domination, originally planned by Russia and Germany.

Sub Attacks Ship Off Puerto Rico

man prison ship Altmark in Norwegian waters, Berlin threatened to extend again her submarine warfare. The German news agency, recalling the 1917 policy of "sinking without trace," stated that because of the British order arming all merchant ships Germany would feel free to wage unrestricted warfare agains all British vessels.

Pending official reports the State Department yesterday would make no statement either in the reported submarine attack on the Southgate near Puerto Rico or the news from Buenos Aires that a German warship flanked by two submarines had been sighted off Brazil.

There was no attempt to deny that both incidents, if true, were clear violations of the security zone which the American republics have tried to draw around themselves.

The Declaration of Panama, enunciated by the foreign ministers of the American republics last September, invited the belligerents to do their sea fighting outside a zone around the American continents south of Canada of an average width of 300 miles.

A few weeks later the British admiralty pointed out that in 1924 Britain and the United States agreed "it was their firm intention to uphold the principle that three marine miles should constitute the proper limit of territorial waters." Similar agreements were entered into by America with Germany and Sweden.

France also officially refused to recognize the validity of the zone, but both the British and French informally told the American governments they would observe it as long as Germany did.

Of December 23 the 21 American republics, including the United States, jointly protested to France, Britain and Germany against the Montevideo naval battle and the sinking and detention of German merchant ships by British vessels in American waters. Both Britain and France rejected this protest and the German government also declined to heed it.

New York, March 1 (AP).—A purported submarine attack tonight off Puerto Rico upon the British steamer Southgate gave the first direct support to reports that at least four German undersea boats were in American waters, with the British South Atlantic squadron on their trail.

Last January 25 the Associated Press was informed by reliable marine sources that a German undersea thrust against British lifelines to Europe from South America appeared imminent.

Along with this there came information of mysterious activity from Mexican ports of fast German vessels believed to have been making supply rendezvous with the submarines.

Visitors returning from Mexican ports have brought stories of uneasiness in the Latin Americas that the Germans might be preparing to seek revenge for the forced self-destruction of the pocket battleship Graf Spee off Montevideo.

In January it appeared the submarines' immediate area of operations was in the vicinity of Trinidad.

Among the German government vessels reported in contact with the submarines was a modern 4,000-ton armed auxiliary.

Naval Battle Reported

Copyright by New York Times

Montevideo, March 1.—The newspaper El Dia announced on its bulletin board at 11 o'clock tonight that a naval battle was in progress 200 miles east of Cape Polonio.

The report, from London, is linked here with earlier rumors that a large German warship, accompanied by two submarines, was sighted off the coast of Rio Grande do Sul headed southward.

It was reported that this squadron was sighted three or four days ago off the northeast shoulder of South America by an oil tanker out of Para, Brazil.

No News, Say British

Montevideo, March 1.—The British legation insisted at 11:30 p. m. tonight that it has absolutely no news of a naval battle off Cape Polonio, nor news of German squadron in the South Atlantic.

German Freighter Caught

Aruba Dutch West Indies, March 1 (AP).—The German freighter Troja, 2,300 tons, which sailed from this oil port, was intercepted by a British cruiser and was burning off Aruba tonight. The crew of the Nazi vessel apparently set fire to the ship.

The Troja sailed at the same time the German freighter Heidelberg departed. There was no word from the Heidelberg. Aruba is well within the American neutrality belt.

Leila Roosevelt and Denis Back After Seeing Jungle Snake Rite

Leila Roosevelt and her husband, Armand Denis, run off their movie film on Africa in the National Geographic Society projection room prior to lecturing last night

Back from somewhere east of Suez where one rides on the head of an elephant ("and there is no other such feeling of majesty") have come Armand Denis and Leila Roosevelt (cousin of the Hyde Park and Oyster Bay branches) with movies of the 1,000-year-old Burmese snake worship ritual.

Miss Roosevelt—who is Mrs Denis—saw the filming, watched the 13-foot king cobra slither from his sacred den, to be kissed three times by the priestess (whose three former husbands died in the process).

Miss Roosevelt knew the snake's venom would kill 100 persons, but she wasn't afraid. She liked it, because the high, sacred mountain in eastern Burma is an informal place and she was comfortable, not having to wear high-heeled shoes. And she watched the ritual, "fascinated."

The movies were seen by a National Geographic Society lecture audience last night. Years ago, Denis heard of the snake cult, snake worship, and, traveling on elephant-back—"where one feels he owns the world." Last year he came on the snake priestess, in a forest clearing.

Surrounded by a group who would invoke the snake deity to improve their fertility, the priestess cast handsful of rice to the four winds above a platter of bananas and other offerings that she probably knew the snake wouldn't eat.

At the gaunt, gray cave of the snake, the priestess began incantations, gesticulating with her hands, prancing, and the large, mean reptile appeared, its tongue shooting out angrily. It reared, until its sacred eyes were level with those of the priestess. At this point she must kiss the snake, three times on the head, thinking, maybe of her three dead husbands.

What ensues would have taught Jim Corbett or Gene Tunney something about foot work, at their best. The priestess darts in, the snake counters; the priestess leads again with her lips and the snake does a cross to the jaw, missing. She darts in, the snake sweeps back, and this goes on until finally three kisses are registered. When it was over, the garments of the priestess were sprayed with venom.

All this was an interlude when the Denis-Roosevelt expedition attempted to go to China from Burma, on the new military road built to get supplies to China's hard-pressed armies. The road was wretched; they couldn't go far. But they got movies of strange places, of mother elephants stopping their log-pushing when their babies want to nurse, and of accommodating elephants known as "aunties" that never have baby elephants of their own but always tag after mother elephants, advising with twists of the trunks and meddlesome bellows how babies should be raised.

"It's all wonderful to do," said Miss Roosevelt.

House Group Hears Vote Plea

legislative or executive actions.

"In view of these facts, and the continuing necessity for assuring the Federal Government proper protection, I shall carefully scrutinize any proposals for reorganization of the District of Columbia government and shall oppose any such proposal which would set up a police force, militia, or any other law enforcement agency within the District of Columbia not subject to exclusive control of the President and the Congress."

While Wilbur S. Finch, president of the District Suffrage Association, urged the subcommittee not to grant the Commissioners broader administrative powers but to substitute an elective council, several witnesses urged that suffrage and reorganization be separated. Two spoke against enfranchisement of District residents.

Found Freedom Here

John J. Gwyn, who said he spoke as a private citizen, told the subcommittee that he was born and reared in south Philadelphia.

"It was worth your life to go out and vote there," he said. "It wasn't until I came here that I knew what real freedom was like."

Mrs. Ruth Buchanan, social welfare patron, kept the committee and the spectators in chuckles as she criticized the laxity of District Commissioners, the "gagging" of department heads, and the neglect of welfare institutions.

She complained that Commissioner George E. Allen "isn't in the city a great deal of the time and is not interested in District institutions."

Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, asked Mrs. Buchanan if Allen were not in charge of welfare activities of the District, and also asked why Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt hadn't spoken to "the man who was appointed by her husband" after she had found "shocking" conditions at Blue Plains.

Coming to the defense of Allen, Representative Bates pointed out that much of his time was taken coming before Congressional committees as he had Thursday on reorganization.

"But Mr. Allen doesn't know anything about reorganization," shot back Mrs. Buchanan.

The witness, who recited her welfare activities, complained that the Commissioners can be found more easily at horse shows than at the District Building.

"I've given up fox hunting," she added, "but I find it's much harder to catch a Congressman. They run faster than a gray fox."

Mrs Buchanan complained that large appropriations are made for a new National Guard armory and a central library, but that welfare institutions are neglected. But when she suggested that self-government would cure this, Representative Nichols started arguing that it wouldn't.

Amid a rapid cross-fire comment, Nichols expressed the belief that other cities with elective officials have much more corruption than Washington.

"Why not take the vote away from the people of Oklahoma?" retorted Mrs. Buchanan.

Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, chimed in that the women interested in welfare work, like herself, might be in the minority and be unable to remedy conditions under an elective form of government.

"I know of no place that minorities have the opportunity to be heard that they have here in the District," said Nichols.

Leifur Magnusson, of the Monday Evening Club, told the subcommittee that he "hoped reorganization will be considered separate from suffrage." While explaining that he favored suffrage, he added:

"I'm afraid they'll both fail if kept together."

After suggesting that the citizens advisory council in the Seal plan be required to make public its recommendations to the Commissioners, and be granted enough money to hold public hearings, Magnusson suggested two reforms as most important.

They are (1) an independent budgetary system in which the Commissioners would submit their estimates directly to Congress and (2) an independent civil service system for the District.

"That ought to be a help to you Congressmen," he said referring to the latter.

Mrs. Joseph Low, of the District League of Women Voters, said her organization favors an elective council and a city manager for Washington.

"It seems incredible that anyone who believes in the deomcratic form of government should be opposed to local suffrage for the District," 'she said.

Kenneth P. Armstrong, of the Burroughs Citizens Association, in a suffrage plea said he also favored an elective school board, although he explained that the present caliber of board members is similar to what might be expected from popular choice.

Finch reviewed the history of the ill-fated territorial government of the District in a long dissertation on the plight of voteless Washingtonians.

In the face of skeptical comments from committee members, he insisted that the failure of the territorial government and the huge debt that was accumulated were the fault of the appointed governor and public works board, rather than the elective lower house of the city assembly.

Finch criticized the present District government as wasteful and inefficient and cited the Prettyman report in support of his charge. Under questioning, however, he said that he did not concur in the report's recommendations that the commission form of government be retained.

The Seal plan "seems to be the acme of perfection in hodgepodge government," he added.

Swedish Colonel Killed Inspecting Troops in Finland

Stockholm, March 1 (INS).—Col. Magnus Dyrssen, commander and organizer of the first Swedish volunteer corps to arrive in Finland, was reported tonight to have been killed in action.

He fell while inspecting his troops on the northern Finnish war front, according to a dispatch received here. He was a former Swedish army officer.

Civic guards overpowered the mutineers.

Finns Pictured Giving Ground To Save Men

of our defenses were created, not by hand, but by nature, in the form of lakes and forests. The Russians have gained ground on the Karelian Isthmus, but from the standpoint of terrain the most difficult part lies ahead of them in the 200 miles to Helsinki."

Col. Per Zilliacus, the Finnish military attache, explained this in detail. He said that virtually the entire region from Viipuri to Helsinki is a rocky, hilly areas abounding in rivers and lakes. The Finns, he said, had so placed their fortifications as to take advantage of these natural defenses.

Moreover, he said, the spring thaws are due in the latter part of April and that will be the "worst time for an army that is trying to move."

"The snow melts, the ice breaks up in the lakes and the roads are in very bad condition for four or five weeks," Col. Zilliacus said. "That will help us. Many people thought that winter would be to our advantage, but that is not altogether so. In winter all the swamps and the 70,000 lakes are frozen. Next to autumn, I would say that winter was the best time for an aggression."

Minister Procope and Col. Zilliacus said Finland had obtained many more airplanes in Europe than she had expected to get, and that 15,000 volunteers, mostly Swedes, had arrived in Finland.

How long could Finland hold out, they were asked.

"I can't answer that," Col. Zilliacus said frankly. "It depends on how much help we get. It depends on developments in Russia and in Germany. All these things enter into the picture."

Mannerheim Saving Men

Discussing the retreat of the Finns in the last month, the Finnish military attache said:

"You can fight in two ways. You can try to hold ground and sacrifice people; that's what the French did at Verdun. But not us. We don't have many people and so Marshal Mannerheim is sacrificing ground to save people."

Why don't Finnish aviators bomb Leningrad, whence come the supplies for the Russian troops now hammering at Viipuri?

"Leningrad would be easy to bomb," Col. Zilliacus said. "But if you do such a thing, you must do it effectively. You must crack up the railways and other communications. We are not sure that we have the planes to do it effectively. In other words, we are not sure that the results would pay for what we would lose."

Minister Procope was asked what Finland planned to do with the $20,000,000 loan authorized by Congress. He said he wouldn't have the complete answer until he had heard from his government. But he was confident that much of the money, like an earlier credit of $10,000,000, would be used to buy corn, wheat, lard, gasoline and the like.

To Order Shells Here

This loan will make it possible for the Finns to release other money for military purchases.

Editor's note: Jesse Jones, Federal Loan Administrator, yesterday announced the Export-Import Bank had allocated $20,000,000 for an additional loan to Finland. He also confirmed a $15,000,000 loan to Sweden and a $10,000,000 loan to Norway. The loans may be used for purchases in this country only and no part of the money may be used for arms, ammunition, or implements of war as defined in the President's proclamation under the Neutrality Act.

Already the Navy has made it possible for Finland to purchase 44 Brewster fighting planes. Some of them are now in Finland. But Col. Zilliacus said that the airplane plants in the United States now are so busy filling orders for this country and for Britain and France that it appeared impossible for Finland to get any more planes until 1941.

He said Finland undoubtedly would order some shells for its artillery in this country, even though it takes eight weeks to fill an order.

Incidentally, he exploded a report that Finland's field guns were made in Germany and that she was dependent on Germany for shells to fit them. The truth is, he said, that most of Finland's big guns were captured from Russia in the war of independence in 1918, or else came from Sweden or France. Some rifles and machine guns, he said, had been bought from Czecho-Slovakia.

Cites Russian Demands

Minister Procope, at outset of his conference, gave an intimate account of the demands Russia made on Finland last autumn. He said:

"A friend once said to me, 'Why didn't you accept the Russian demands? Didn't you know better than to try and fight a country 50 times bigger than you?' Well, here is what the Russians demanded.

"They demanded the Hangoe Peninsula on the southwestern tip of Finland. They wanted to establish a naval base there. They also wanted, to move in infantry, artillery and tanks.

"Then the Russians demanded that we give up a large part of the Karelian Isthmus and destroy the Mannerheim fortifications on the isthmus.

"They also asked for the so-called Fisherman's Peninsula, which dominates Petsamo in the north, and for a group of Finnish Islands in the Gulf of Finland.

"Had we given in to Russia on these demands, she would have had a complete grip on Finland. What the Russians were aiming at was shown three days after they attacked Finland, when a so-called Communist government was set up for Finland.

"That government was composed entirely of Russian citizens—men who had been born in Finland but who had lived in Moscow most of their lives. The Russians thus showed that they expected to make Bolsheviks out of us or send us to Siberia.

"In order fully to understand the Russian demands, the following analogy may be made. It was as if a foreign power demanded the islands of Nantucket Sound, the Golden Gate at San Francisco, and part of the New England States.

"The principle that a large power has a right to seize a smaller is absolutely unjustified. I think that such a principle, if accepted, would be the beginning of the end of all international justice."

pended animation and curtailed diplomatic representation. They were discussed in the conference between Welles and State Secretary Baron Ernest von Weizsaecker, at the foreign office late this afternoon.

[Von Ribbentrop was understood to have minced no words concerning the state of German-American relations, the Associated Press reported. Men close to the foreign office said the foreign minister expressed regret the United States government failed to maintain an ambassador in Berlin at this critical time, the Associated Press dispatch said.

[The United States and Germany have been without ambassadors in each other's capitals since November, 1938.—Editor's note.]

Greeted by Air Alarm

Welles arrived exactly on the first half-year date of the "great German war of liberation" to quote the semi-official statement, and got his first taste of war conditions when, by coincidence, air-alarm sirens began to shriek just as his auto was passing through Wilhelmstrasse on the way to Adlon Hotel. But it was only a trial of the alarm system.

Shortly afterwards, wearing a top hat, and accompanied by equally top-hatted Alexander Kirk, the American Charge d'Affaires in Berlin, Welles proceeded to the foreign office for the conference with Von Ribbentrop who, though speaking perfect English, preferred to speak German rather than the language of his country's foe. Dr. Paul Schmitt acted as interpretor.

Today's conference was supposed to be in the nature of a preliminary exchange of views between the foreign office chiefs of two big powers, and a joint survey of the world situation preparatory to Welles' reception by Hitler tomorrow. But the length of the conference itself suggests the searching nature of the discussion and the wide range of topics covered.

Following it, Welles said, since his talks were confidential and intended for a report to President Roosevelt only, he could say nothing about them except that he was courteously received and that today's talk had been "extremely interesting."

Well-informed German quarters, as well as the semiofficial statement issued by the Deutsches Nachrichtenburo, left little doubt as to the nature of the conversation.

No Talk of Peace

According to these sources, Welles was bluntly told that, inasmuch as Hitler's last peace offer had been spurned, Germany had accepted the challenge of the Western Powers, so there could be no further talk of peace. The semiofficial statement, which must be assumed to be in the same tenor as Von Ribbentrop's own statement, says:

"England and France declared war on Germany. They brutally rejected the attempt of the Fuehrer to spare Europe from an armed conflict by the Western Powers with Germany, through a generous, far-reaching peace offer. The war will, therefore, be carried through to its rational end, that can consist only in the final security of the German lebensraum (living room) and an assurance of the freedom of the seas.

"Both presuppose that after this war English plutocracy shall no longer be in a position to threaten the life of other nations from whom it fears disturbance of its interests.

"The balance which political quarters draw up at the beginning of the seventh month of the war, is briefly as follows:

1. England and France know today they cannot win victory by either economic or military measures.

2. German counter-measures against the illegal English long distance blockade, as shown in the rising figure of ship sinkings, are beginning to put England in that position which it vainly attempted to put the German people.

3. German armed forces, ready for action, await the command for a decisive blow from where nobody knows, or when it will come, but of which everybody can be convinced that it will place in shade all previous ideas of military penetration power.

Soviet "Friendship" Cited

The statement continues to charge England with trying to drag neutrals into the war, which would merely mean sacrificing them while Germany's "friendship" with Soviet Russia not only keeps Germany's back free militarily, but also assures the failure of the English attempt to starve her out. It then concludes:

"Conscious of her military superiority and economic invulnerability, Germany looks forward at the end of the first half-year of war to a decision which is joyfully awaited not only by her, but by all the young nations of Europe, in particular, Fascist Italy."

As to what Germany means by breaking the power of the British "plutocracy," Ribbentrop was equally frank.

It means, he explained, the end of British control of the seas and the surrender of her far-flung citadels such as Gibraltar, the Suez Canal, and others which permit her to terminate the freedom of the seas and to put a strangle-hold on world commerce, whenever it suits her interests.

But it also means the elimination of British influence and interference in the affairs of the European continent and the termination of the balance of power, and, thereby, the security of German Lebensraum beyond all challenge, it was explained.

In illustrating his points, Ribbentrop is believed to have frequently drawn American analogies.

Bermuda, it was suggested, is a pin-prick in America's flank, but what, it is asked, would the United States say if Great Britain controlled the Panama Canal and refused to let American ships pass through it?

Welles Gets More 'Facts'—in German!

French Meatless, Drinkless Or Sweetless 6 Days a Week

By the Associated Press

Paris, March 1.—French civilians tonight found themselves facing sharp restrictions on what they may eat and drink six days out of every seven. The restrictions, announced in 17 decrees, are:

Monday—No beef, mutton or veal dishes.

Tuesday—No beef, no pastry, candy or ice cream, and no spirits or aperitifs. Wine is not yet restricted.

Wednesday—Still no pastry, candy or ice cream.

Thursday—Another drinkless day so far as spirits are concerned.

Friday—No meat and no pastry or sweets.

Saturday—Pay day, but no alcohol.

On Sundays the Frenchman is limited to two main dishes with each meal, and only one of these can be meat. Restaurants will limit the amount of bread he can get—if he has a bread card after rationing starts.

Side dishes of butter are forbidden, unless they are a regular part of the main dishes.

The regulations on meat already are in effect. The remaining regulations will become effective when officials issue orders to restaurants, cafes and stores.

As a prelude to the issuance of ration cards, a general census was ordered completed by April 1.

German Planes Attack Convoy

dents in towns along the estuary had seen a lone Nazi raider this morning and again this evening, flying amid the white puffs of 50 or more bursting shells from batteries along shore.

Meanwhile the 5,340-ton Italian steamer Mirella, bound for a port in northern England, sank two minutes after an explosion believed to have been caused by a mine, 14 miles off the coast of Suffolk. Eleven of the crew are missing. Others got away in two lifeboats and rowed 27 miles. One of the boats was washed ashore at Aldeburgh, Suffolk, with nine of the crew and one dead companion. Another boat containing seven survivors came ashore 3 miles further along the coast.

The 7,418-ton Blue Funnel liner Pyrrhus was sunk "by enemy action" of the west coast of England. Seventy of the crew were rescued. Eight Chinese stokers were trapped below deck.

Today's Nazi air raids on shipping were followed by a claim on the German radio that several ships of high tonnage in a British convoy had been sunk by bombs, that others had been set on fire and the convoy broken up. It was denied officially in London tonight that any damage had been suffered by merchant ships in convoy or by any warship forming the escort.

British fighting planes sped aloft as the radiers swooped, but failed to establish contact with the enemy. Other pursuit planes were dispatched to aid several trawlers which were attacked off the Yorkshire coast at daybreak.

One trawler, the Courage, was bombed and machine-gunned at close range, the third such attack she has suffered since the outbreak of war. The Courage put back to Whitby but left again in an hour.

The motor yawl Sisters, with two on board, returned to Fraserburgh, Aberdeenshire, and reported that at 1 a. m. today, two Nazi planes had flown overhead. One veered off, but the other descended to 100 feet, released a bomb and flew away.

The 1,583-ton Norwegian steamer Brott was one of the neutral freighters attacked today. Five of the crew are missing, and are believed to be adrift in a small boat. The Brott, with its steering gear, radio and compass out of action, was brought into port by a coast lifeboat.

This afternoon a lifeboat returned to the Yorkshire coast after a vain search for the 3,206-ton Latvian steamer Katvaldis, which had flashed an S O S early today saying she was being bombed and machine-gunned by Nazi planes.

Guard Sea Rights, Nazis Warn Neutrals

Must Not Accept British Control, Scandinavia Told

By Joseph Grigg, Jr.
United Press Staff Writer.

Berlin, March 1.—Germany issued a sharp warning to neutral nations today that acceptance of the British contraband control would be regarded by the German government as "not in accordance with their neutrality or sovereignty."

The warning was issued through D. N. B., the official German news agency, and referred, authorized quarters said, to acceptance of British navicerts.

"In connection with the question of acceptance of British sea control by neutral states, it is hereby indicated that responsible quarters have given it to be understood that this acceptance cannot be regarded as in conformity either with their neutrality or sovereignty," N. N. B. said.

The statement was construed as an unofficial but prompt answer to protests lodged yesterday with both belligerents by Norway, Sweden and Denmark against the sea war against neutral shipping, which the Scandinavians said was in violation of international law.

The notes, almost identical documents from Oslo, Stockholm and Copenhagen, were not received favorably here, according to information made available to the foreign press. Particular exception was taken to that part of the protests dealing with "illegal mine warfare."

A foreign office spokesman, questioned today by Scandinavian newspapermen, said:

"Germany does not consider it a particular proof of genuine neutrality if members of the neutral states submit to the English claim to control neutral shipping. It seems as though, in some neutral states, insufficient attention is given to the fact that by such submission to British violations of law they are gradually losing their legal protection from further violations by England. Such signs of weakness invite ever new violations of neutrality."

Information made available to the foreign press, referring to the Scandinavian protests said:

"Any reference to Germany in this respect (mine warfare) is completely out of order as the use of mines by Germany has been in the fullest accordance with international regulations."

Commenting on the portion of the protests dealing with the sinking of ships by U-boats and airplanes, the information said:

"One sees here a certain absence of logic in the request that Germany cease this manner of warfare. This request means nothing more than demanding that Germany supend legal measures of defense against the illegal English blockade, which is directed against women and children."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown

Friday Morning Music Club presents Edwin Charles Steffe, barytone (Dorothy Radde Emery, accompanist); Edna C. Wheelwright, soprano (Frances O. Berrett, accompanist); Lila Burt, violinist, and Alcie Brooks, pianist.

Members and guests of the Friday Morning Music Club, assembled in Barker Hall yesterday, enjoyed a program of which the apex was the singing of Edwin Charles Steffe. Notwithstanding a malicious "frog in the throat" which cut off one of his high notes, his barytone voice was in excellent condition and served him well in his readings. The tone was firm, round and resonant, with fine shadings of color for the alternations between lyric tenderness and emotional intensity.

Mr. Steffe's artistic progress in the last few years has rewarded the watchfulness of his well-wishers. A sincere pursuer of the ideal, he has steadfastly maintained his standards, and the results of this integrity are increasingly manifest in his singing. His interpretations are the outcome of both intelligent analysis and poetic insight. His offerings yesterday were the arioso, "De l'art, splendeur immortelle" from Eugene Diaz's "Benevenuto Celini," Hageman's "Christ Went Up Into the Hills Alone," Rachmaninoff's "Morning," Edgar Priest's "Shadows," the Scottish folksong, "Leezie Lindsay" and Fay Foster's "My Journey's End."

Edna C. Wheelwright, an engaging singer with a clear and flexible voice, contributed Strauss' "Zueignung," Schubert's "Die Forelle," Guion's "At the Cry of the First Bird," Harriet Brewer's "Fairy Pipers" and Svante Sjoeberg's "Visions." Her soprano has an appealing quality enhanced by her surety in intonation.

Mozart's F major sonata for violin and piano was pleasantly played by Lila Burt and Alcie Brooks who sedulously observed the style of the music.

Church of the Week

Youth Plays Leading Role In Ninth St. Christian Affairs

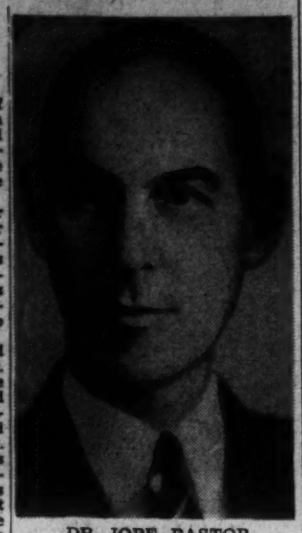

Pastor Organized Junior Church And Junior Board

The approaching celebration of annual "Youth Month" at Ninth Street Christian Church again will bring into the limelight the congregation's unique and large-scale youth leadership program. The observance will be held in April.

Through a junior church, junior official board, Christian Endeavor Societies and Young People's department, the congregation is strengthening church loyalty, developing character, training youths for church positions of responsibility, and increasing its membership at a remarkable rate.

The idea of a junior church and junior board originated with Dr. Clifford H. Jope, pastor, who came to the congregation in 1931 and found an abundance of youth material—"buried," he said. He rolled up his sleeves and went to work.

Development of the material was not an easy task at first, he admitted yesterday. But soon his efforts began to bear fruit, with the result that today the youth activities are an integral and indispensable phase of the church's work.

DR. JOPE, PASTOR

Brings the Message

While many of the original members of the original junior church stepped up to official adult positions, one chose to remain in a supervisory capacity, and is now doing a very commendable task as head of the unit. He is Andrew Shannon.

Each Sunday morning, while the adults are having their service in the main auditorium, the junior church meets in another part of the building—the church house—which was purchased for $10,000 in 1930.

Mr. Shannon brings the sermon message, the junior church 22-voice vested choir sings under Mrs. Jope's direction, and Communion is celebrated. Nellie Mae Jope, the pastor's daughter, plays the piano.

Eight to 14 is the average age in the junior church, out of which have gone several youths now studying for the Christian ministry. They are James Ellerbrook and Fred Forney, in their first and second years, respectively, at Butler University Theological Seminary, Indianapolis, and Gay Morrow, of Lynchburg College, Lynchburg, Va.

Ralph Frame, now a student at Texas Christian University, Fort Worth, Tex., also a junior church alumni, is considering a ministerial career. James Mowday and Daniel Herrera also are aiming at such a career.

That number is more than have prepared for such a career in the entire history of the church, according to Dr. Jope. His Sunday night congregation is often comprised of one-half to two-thirds of young people.

Elmer Whitney serves as chairman of the junior board, which consists of representatives from all youth organizations of the congregation. The members take up the offering on Sundays in the adult church service, assist in Communion, and sponsor the annual "Youth Month."

While the junior church members are dropped from the rolls upon marriage, the board made an exception in the case of Elmer Whitney, since he is the link between the adult official board and the junior board. They meet once monthly at different homes, and elect new members.

Music Emphasized

Dr. Jope made it plain yesterday that the junior board is an efficient, business-like and smooth-functioning organization, not tolerating any tardiness or laxity in duties. It is a recognized committee of the adult board.

The young people's department, of the 18 to 25-year-old age group, is supervised by Dr. Jope, and was organized two years ago. Miss Alice Harvey is president.

Meeting in the section of the church remodeled for youth activities two years ago at a cost of $14,000, the department not only conducts courses in personal problems of Christian living, the origin and nature of the Bible and other subjects, but also maintains a service section, by which youths get opportunities for fuller expression in worship, music, fellowship and other activities.

Christian Endeavor societies and leaders are: The Crusaders, Miss Vesta Orrick, advisor, and Mary Louise Jones, president; Forum, Nellie Mae Jope, president and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hilley, advisors; Young People's, Miss Louise Whitney, president, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter McCurdy, advisers, and the Philo-Christos, Robert Middleton, president.

Music always has held an important spot in activities of the Ninth street body, especially since the coming of Dr. Jope, lover of classical music, and who led his pastor-father's church choir when he was 16 years old. Emphasis on music has made his a "singing church," and brought a deeper appreciation of the better type of sacred music, he explained.

In addition to the junior church choir, there is a "training choir," through which youths graduate to the junior choir, and the adult choir, led by J. O. Harrison, director of the congregation's music for 35 years. Dr. Jope is particularly proud of his junior choir, which has been asked to repeat its appearance at the New York World's Fair next Labor Day week-end. Directed by the pastor, it scored a big hit last year.

Pastor Praises Mr. Bishop

Among other organizations and leaders are the Sunday school, Joseph A. Scott; woman's council, Mrs. Clifford H. Jope; Lydia Bible class, A. J. Bishop, teacher, and Miss Bertha Jabin, president, and the men's club, Maj. W. W. Kirby. Recently organized, the men's group is sponsoring boys' activities, including Scout Troop No. 10, of which Leonard Sherry is scoutmaster.

Praising Mr. Bishop, for more than 30 years Lydia class teacher, Dr. Jope said "lots of the success of this church is due to that man."

Dr. Jope will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "Safeguarding the Crown," and at 7:45 p. m. on "The Forgiveness of Sins." Mrs. H. B. Douglas will give the sermon story in the junior church. Carl Hillman, jr., Jane Payne and Dorothy O'Connor will take part. The annual "love gift" offering of the women's council will be received this Wednesday at 10:30 a. m. at the church.

"JESUS, LOVER OF MY SOUL"
• • • CHARLES WESLEY • • •

Jesus, Lover of my soul,
Let me to Thy bosom fly;
While the nearer waters roll,
While the tempest still is high:
Hide me, O my Saviour hide,
Till the storm of life is past;
Safe into the haven guide,

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

Most of Charles Wesley's 600 hymns are inspired by his actual experiences. But, whether this idea came to him from a tempest on the ocean, or from the storms of passion, we do not know. If he had never written another hymn, this alone would have immortalized his name.

In 1922 he was placed in charge of Near East Relief Work for Armenian refugees in Greece and Turkey and directed removal of 2,500 to Egypt. Under his supervision homes and schools for the refugees were established in Alexandria and Cairo, Egypt, and the Near East Relief Circle was organized to provide social and recreational opportunities for them.

Other survivors are four brothers, Will H. Davidson, of Ironton, Ohio; Herbert and Theodore Davidson, of Columbus, Ohio, and Asbury Davidson, of Dayton, Ohio. An aunt, Mrs. L. C. Littlejohn, of Oconee, Ill., and a sister-in-law, Mrs. Anna Davidson, of Cleveland, Ohio, also survive.

Decision on Betsey Roosevelt's Divorce Plea Is Delayed

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

Mrs. Betsey Cushing Roosevelt arrived in Los Angeles yesterday to complete proceedings for the counter-suit for divorce against James Roosevelt, the President's eldest son. She parried all questions about her plans with a smile when reporters sought to interview her on the train. She was accompanied by her brother, Henry K. Cushing.

out a $25,000 insurance policy for each child. The settlement remains to be approved officially by Judge Thomas C. Gould.

Mrs. Roosevelt, dressed in navy blue and a broad hat, and wearing a full-length mink coat, smiled as she entered the courtroom to hear a stipulation that the case might be tried as a default without opposition from her husband. He filed the first suit, charging desertion, February 15, but she entered a cross-complaint five days later, accusing him of cruelty and desertion.

She was on the stand only briefly, categorically denying Roosevelt's charges.

"In May, 1938, in Washington, D. C., did you have a conversation with your husband?" her attorney asked.

Asked Divorce While Here

"Yes, he asked me for a divorce at that time," she replied.

"Was that the first you knew that he desired a divorce?"

"Yes."

"What did you say?"

"I refused to give him a divorce at that time."

"And were your relations strained after that?"

"Yes."

Mrs. Roosevelt then testified that her husband left the East and came to California, in October, 1938.

"Did he ask you to accompany him?"

"No."

She added that she followed Roosevelt out here in November, 1938.

"What happened then?"

"He said he wanted a divorce and asked me to leave California."

"Did you leave?"

"Yes, as I thought it was best for the children."

"Did he ever ask you to return?" interposed Judge Thomas C. Gould.

Roosevelt Silent

Roosevelt could not be located for comment. His office said he returned yesterday from a trip to Philadelphia and Washington and planned to leave tomorrow for Chicago to confer with officials of a novelty company regarding his recently announced "nickel-in-the-slot" movies.

The President's son recently formed Globe Productions, Inc., his own film unit, after spending more than a year learning the business as a $750-a-week assistant to Samuel Goldwyn.

He has appeared only seldom at Hollywood social functions, usually with Goldwyn. Occasionally his companion has been Romelle Schneider, his nurse when he was ill 18 months ago.

Democrats Join Fight on Census

Austin (Republican), of Vermont declared:

"In view of the present condition in the world and in our country it is very important that we satisfy our people we are not on the road to tyranny and that we do not want to take away their rights of privacy."

Representative Plumley (Republican), of Vermont, read letters which he said showed "the moral indignation with which these questions will be greeted."

Divorced Questions Attacked

Representative Miller (Republican), of Connecticut, said no such questions should be asked in a period of "disturbed world conditions and loose talk about a dictatorship in the United States."

And Senator Tobey, whose radio speeches on the issue brought 5,000 replies, said protests were increasing "to the extent of another Boston tea party." He widened his attack to complain of census questions on divorce.

Political concern at the questionnaire was evinced by some Democrats after letters started pouring into the Capitol, in response to Tobey's speeches, protesting the intimate nature of the questions and penalties for failure to answer.

One Senator privately expressed the view that the income questions, if allowed to remain, "would be worth a million votes to the Republican Party."

Resentment Puzzling

Veteran members of Congress were puzzled at the resentful public reaction, especially since the questionnaires (except for the income data), are in substance the same as those used in the census of 1920 and 1930, and there is no change in the penalties which may be invoked for failure to answer correctly or refusal to answer at all.

Some members said they believed the resentment was grounded in an underlying public distaste for anything smacking of Government prying into private affairs.

"People apparently believe that a law which threatens to throw them in jail for refusal to answer questions about their income, bathtubs and whether their houses are made of wood or bricks sounds like something taken out of a Hitler-Stalin catechism," it was commented.

No Protests in 1930

The fact that most of the questions were in the 1930 census and then aroused no protest was held by Republicans to indicate an underlying public aliveness to conditions in some totalitarian states and a determination that individual privacy rights here be not interfered with.

Discounting any real basis for controversy, some leaders recalled President Roosevelt's first reorganization bill fight, when "dictatorship" charges reached a crescendo out of all proportion to the issue involved. At a later session, Congress passed the revised reorganization bill with scarcely a struggle.

Questions protested by Tobey which started the controversy are:

32. Amount of money wages or salary received (including commissions), affecting all earning less than $5,000.

33. Did this person receive income of $50 or more from sources other than money wages or salary? (Yes or No).

Kansas Politics Probed

Questionnaires already have been printed, so if the census is to start as scheduled April 1, it was pointed out that compliance with any Senate resolution that may be adopted must be carried out by specific instructions to census takers.

The Senate's special Senate Campaign Funds Committee meanwhile decided to organize a staff immediately to police elections after complaints of "political abuse" had been received from Kansas.

The committee heard charges that State patronage is being used in Kansas to influence selection of delegates to the Republican National Convention, decided the complaint came within its jurisdiction and prepared to investigate.

Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, chairman of the committee, said it was the first complaint with any "apparently factual basis" and will be thoroughly scrutinized.

Donahey May Retire

In addition to its former job of overseeing Senatorial elections only, the special committee this year is charged with supervising enforcement of the Hatch Act and patronage use in selection of convention delegates.

The Capitol today awaited the decision of Senator Donahey (Democrat), of Ohio, on whether to file for reelection to the Senate. Close friends of Donahey have predicted he will announce his intention to retire.

Donahey, who recently refused to run as a favorite son "stalking horse" for the President in Ohio's Presidential preference primary, commented only:

"I have talked to absolutely no one and any statement as to my plans is a sheer guess."

Arthur Hale, Coal Official, Is Dead at 80

Son of Novelist Succumbs After A Heart Attack

Arthur Hale, son of Edward Everett Hale, nineteenth century writer and clergyman died late Thursday at Garfield Hospital following a heart attack. He was 80 years old.

A native of Boston and member of a well-known Massachusetts family, he was a great-great-nephew of Capt. Nathan Hale, of Revolutionary War fame. Mr. Hale was graduated from Harvard in 1880. From 1882 to 1901 he had been employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad, then had served in various capacities with the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad until 1909. In the same year, he became general agent of the American Railway Association, and in 1916 was elected vice president of the Consolidation Coal Co.

Since 1921 Mr. Hale had served as commissioner of the American Wholesale Coal Association, secretary of the Wholesale Coal Code Authority under NRA, chairman of the executive committee of Tidewater Coal Exchange, and at time of his death was chairman of the Coal Exporters Association.

hilarity. Posters caricaturing the potential candidates adorned the walls of the ballroom. They were drawn by Walter Karig, correspondent for the Newark News and chairman of the Press Club's entertainment committee.

McNutt "An Angel"

McNutt was pictured with the wings of an angel and described as "98 per cent pure," while "Vacillate With Vandenberg" showed the Michigan Senator with a weathervane for a necktie, arrows at both ends pointing "right" and "left."

A course of "socialist conservatism" was advocated for Thomas, whose poster urged "Back to Normancy with Normal Thomas." The Postmaster General and the Secretary of State were depicted adrift at sea in a tub, "Doing Farley Well on the Hull." Dewey was pictured as a mustached baby playing with alphabetical blocks, his slogan inquiring, "Dewey—Or Don't We?"

The Attorney General was shown poised to start a footrace, with President Roosevelt giving him a final pat on the back, while his slogan declared, "Confusevelt Say: My Jack's on Jackson." Senator Wheeler was drawn seated in a wheelbarrow which John L. Lewis and Big Business were pushing toward the White House—"The Wheeler Way to the White House."

Hosts and guests had just seated themselves for dinner when a correspondent made up to represent Vice President Garner entered and walked along the speakers' table seeking his place. In one hand he carried a quart of whisky, in the other a deck of cards. Finding his place, he sat down, poured a drink from the bottle and dealt himself a poker hand. These actions he repeated throughout the dinner, speaking to no one and acknowledging no word spoken to him.

Stuffed Shirt Present

At the center of the speakers' table was a chair supporting a stuffed shirt, a white garment with straw sticking out from the collar.

"This," explained Press Club President Richard L. Wilson, "is in honor of our absent guests."

Accustomed though they may be to individual remarks by way of introduction when they speak in public, the ten guests of honor were leveled by introductory speeches absolutely dittoed. Each potential candidate was introduced by a Press Club member from his own State, who said:

"The man I am about to introduce needs no introduction. He rose from humble circumstances by his own efforts to become the man whom every patriotic American hopes to see guide the ship of state over the waterfalls of adversity. The man whom the farmers, the C. I. O., and the bankers and the National Press Club consider the outstanding man whom, fellow citizens, I nominate . . ."

Entertainment included music by the United States Navy Band under direction of Lieut. Charles Benter.

Wilson served as master of ceremonies. The event was arranged by a special subcommittee of the club's entertainment committee which included, in addition to Karig, Howard Acton, Harlan Miller, Ernest Lindley, Morris D. Ervin and Fulton Lewis, jr.

Edward G. Robinson Reveals a Splendid Characterization at Earle

'Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet' Is A Film Triumph; Amusing Radio Revue

By Richard L. Coe.
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

IN EVERY SENSE a fine and engrossing photoplay, "The Story of Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet" opened yesterday at the Earle Theater before an audience which patently appreciated the moving, human qualities of this splendid cinematic biography.

The Warner Brothers studio is no stranger to scientific figures as "The Story of Louis Pasteur" proved four years ago. In the new film, the hero is the German scientist, whose experiments with aniline dyes, in staining the tubercule bacillus and in aiding in the discovery of the antitoxin for diphtheria occupied his early years and whose ultimate triumph was the discovery of salvarsan, the specific for syphilis. A forthright screenplay, it faces its stirring subject unflinchingly, at the same time avoiding the pitfalls of sensationalism.

Paul Ehrlich's credo is a continual search for the truths which will kill disease and make of the human race a better people. His private life is a devotion to his soft-spoken wife and a deep bond of friendship with others in his profession who seek the same results. His foes are those forces of conservatism which ever stand in the way of progress. His road is not easy, but Paul Ehrlich faces it with a courage that is miraculously translated by superb writing and eloquent acting onto the magic of celluloid.

Unlike more than one other current film of the medical world, "The Story of Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet" does not strangle itself by its own restraint or its own bravado. It has that kindly humor, that relaxed quality that any convincing film must have. The grim, taut moments are reached through controlled acceleration.

Edward G. Robinson's playing of the title role is a masterpiece of the actor's art. Behind make-up that in itself is an achievement, Robinson gives a moving performance that would be hard to equal. Ruth Gordon's quiet Frau Ehrlich is similarly incandescent and Otto Krugar's devoted but questioning friend is in keeping with the all-inclusive distinction of the film.

The screen-play of John Huston, Heinz Herald and Norman Burnside, covering a period of 35 years is exceptionally praiseworthy, while such reliable performers as Maria Ouspenskaya, Donald Crisp, Montagu Love and Sig Rumann are invaluable. A recent arrival from Germany, Albert Basserman is kindly humorous as an understanding oldster.

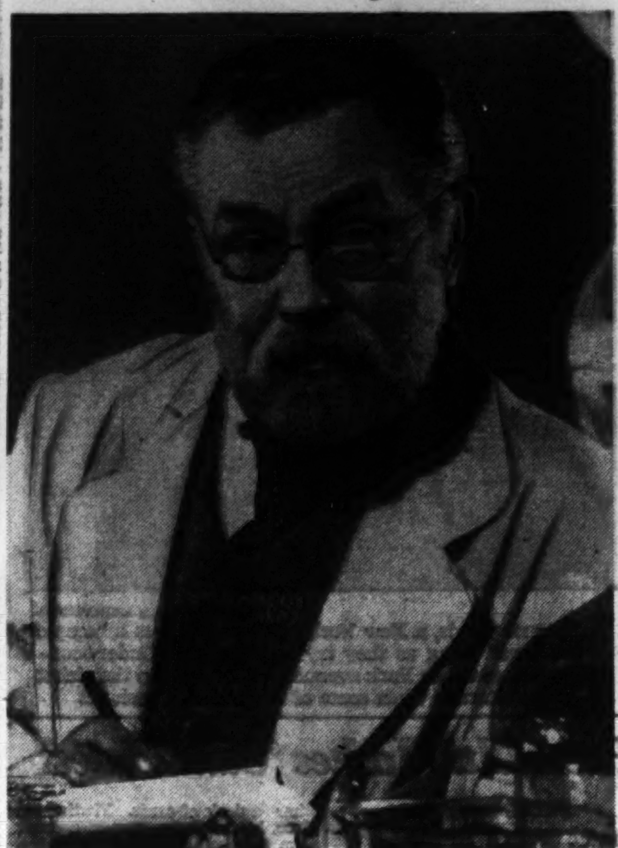

There is much to be said, too, for the Earle's new stage revue, a salute to WJSV's "50,000 Watt Week," titled "CSB Radio Revue." Songstress Jane Froman chants Gershwin's "It Ain't Necessarily So" and Cole Porter's "Begin the Beguine" to a pleased house as the nominal headliner and Professor Quiz returns to the city where he first gained his fame to give away silver dollars to the bright — but frightened — burghers who troop up to the stage. It's pleasingly novel.

Jerry Cooper's smilingly delivered songs, the dancing Roxyettes and the acrobatic Letrees contribute their specialties. (Why is it that during every acrobatic trick on the Earle stage during the past year we've had an idea that the Roxyettes are watching so closely because they will be doing the same thing in a few weeks?)

But best of all on the Earle stage are the Hartmans. Every mad little dance they do is perfect and if any dance team should ever dare attempt the Ravel Bolero within our vision from this time henceforth, they will get konked with an egg.

"Dr. Ehrlich" and the Hartmans make this Earle bill something not to be missed.

A Future Academy Winner?

EDWARD G. ROBINSON in the title role of "The Story of Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet," which opened yesterday on the Earle screen, the erstwhile gangster delineator turns in a characterization that rockets him high in the race for 1940's highest acting honors

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, March 1.

A 17-YEAR-OLD BOY named Jack White applied for an office-boy job with Norman Bel Geddes, the streamline-designer. White was interviewed, and was told that he'd be informed whether the job was his . . . At 11 a. m. Wednesday, Bel Geddes instructed his secretary: "Tell Jack White to come here in an hour, and I'll put him to work" . . . At 12, Bel Geddes returned to his office, and there found the red-eyed veteran comic, Jack White of the 18 Club, who had been roused from the slumber to which he retires at 8 a. m. daily—White, who was protesting to Bel Geddes' secretary: "But I don't understand it. I can't draw a line; I can't paint a stroke."

KATHARINE HEPBURN will return to Hollywood on June 1. On that day she'll conclude her tour, in Chicago . . . Jacqueline Cochran, the aviatrix, will go to Los Angeles on March 10, and will make an attempt to crack the 2,000 meter record . . . Because "Birth of A Nation" caused race-riots in Harlem, when it was shown there, colored press-agents are being hired to prepare Harlem for "Gone With The Wind."

BEN BERNIE was induced to apply for membership at a Long Island golf club. During a high-stake golf match, Bernie was called from the tee to appear before the membership committee . . . While the impatient band leader was eager to resume his match, the committee members—still retaining accents—questioned him about his business, bank accounts and education . . . Bernie answered all their questions, and was about to tear himself away—when the committee members asked him for social references . . . Exasperated, he blurted: "Jock Whitney and Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt" . . . "Come, come, Mr. Bernie," he was cautioned. "Vitney and Wanderbilt?" Give us people we know."

MIRIAM HOPKINS was hostess at a cocktail party recently, to which she invited five ladies and 20 men, including Conde Nast, Sir Victor Sassoon, Alfred deLiagre, jr., etc. . . . The men reprimanded her later, for having supplied so few members of the opposite sex. "I'll do better next time," Miriam promised. "I'll have more girls." And so a few days ago she gave another cocktail party. This time she invited seven girls—and 30 men.

DURING THE BOSTON try-out of Elmer Rice's "Two on an Island," a storm swept through the city. It suddenly hit the theater, and the sandbag weights began to sway perilously above the actors backstage . . . While the cast remained transfixed, hailstones pelted the roof—and the frightened actors looked up . . . anxiously waiting to see what would happen . . . "Well, let's go," Elmer laughed, easing the tension. "This ought to make all of you glad you're in America."

CAPT. GILBERT T. RUDE, of the Department of Commerce, is the inventor of the "Rude Stafinder & Identifer," standard equipment on every naval vessel and airplane. Ten years ago he was awarded the Norman Medal, highest award of the American Social of Civil Engineers . . . Capt. Rude never wears the medal, even at full-dress official functions. "I never had a miniature made," he confessed . . . "But then what use is there for your medal?" he was asked . . . "Oh, it'll have its uses," said Capt. Rude. "When my son presents me with a grandson, I'll let him cut his teeth on it."

LAST WEEK the reviewers acclaimed an exciting book, "Decade," by an unknown named Stephen Longstreet. Within the next few days another publisher will release "Am So Dedicated," by an unknown named William Burton. Burton and Longstreet are one. And his name is neither Burton, nor Longstreet . . . John Barrymore and Elaine Barrie will have their portraits painted next week by Paul Meltsner—whose portrait of Martha Graham was purchased by an Argentinian Museum, as a good-will gesture to America . . . George White bade farewell to New York last night at the Beachcombers, Broadway's newest hot-spot. White will become advance-man for his touring "Scandals," motoring through America, one week ahead of his show.

Dancing Trio Taps Happily At the Capitol

Astaire-Powell-Murphy In 'Broadway Melody;' Jack Durant on Stage

If this "Broadway Melody of 1940" isn't what press agents call a "feast of terpsichore," it surely will do until one comes along.

The dancing by Fred Astaire, Eleanor Powell and George Murphy has that flash that leaves you dizzily satisfied. Astaire is the standout of the three, naturally. His razor edge of perfection in dancing and his brilliant sense of the theater are not to be topped in this weary world.

Among the many shining dance numbers that will fix this show in your memory are an Astaire and Powell version of "Begin the Beguine," sensuous but sharply tempoed. Romance gets a huge inning in their Pierrot and Pierrette impression. George Murphy and La Powell also go to town in glamor style in a ballroom dance that includes some fantastic sliding.

But the big moment of "Broadway Melody of 1940" to these eyes arrived when Fred Astaire danced all by himself in a deserted theater. He made you believe that he was a young fellow just dancing solitaire for fun and because his heart was full. Yes, the clatter of Fred Astaire's dancing feet is one of the sweetest sounds in the American theater.

The photography is something superb, especially in the handling of intricate reflections. The songs are so good that they're already hits, especially that "I Concentrate On You." Such excellent acting folk as Frank Morgan and Ian Hunter lend richness and gayety to the picture's texture. Pretty Florence, Rice, Lynne Carver and Ann Morris do sparkling bits in unexceptional style. Adrian's costumes again testify to his imagination as a couturier.

Altogether "Broadway Melody of 1940" is pretty much a model of what a big musical should be. If there's anything to criticize, it's Miss Powell's acting (but can one criticize the nonexistent?) and the design of her shoes which doesn't flatter her ankles one little bit.

Sam Jack Kaufman, powerhouse direction, elegant tailoring and all, is back on the Capitol podium this week. The good news is that he hasn't bought that return ticket to Detroit this time and will remain at the Capitol for an indefinite period. The current Kaufman overture is a melange of Gershwin, arranged effectively and played beautifully.

Jack Durant, who is what we'd call a raconteur, practically swipes the stage show, inciting whistling, shouts and applause from that Friday afternoon audience of high schoolers. One of the able Romano Brothers sings "Ol' Man River" with tears flowing down his cheeks. We don't know whether to credit the tears to onions, glycerin or because he cries easily. Songs by the Randall Sisters, graceful dancing by Harris, Claire and a full-fledged minstrel show by the Rockets in pink top hats are other items that will send you out of the Capitol to tell your friends they mustn't miss getting there this week.

MARY HARRIS.

Howard

The swingy Benny Carter band, with Songstress Billie Holiday and dashes of snappy dancing and fun-filled skits are the prime ingredients of a tasty entertainment dish served piping hot to the Howard Theater patrons this week.

The Carter band swings into their musical groove with a combination of old favorites, "Who" and "Sleep" plus newer and warmer numbers, "Afro Congo," his own original "Kansas City Mood" and "Slow Freight."

Billie Holiday, long a favorite with hotcha music fans, comes back to the T street show shop after an absence of three months to bring down the house with her famous "Man I Love." Pedros and Delores proved a classy rhythm dance team, while Spic and Span, two sepia lads, pleased with a barrage of rapid fire tapping.

On the screen, Charlie Chan play by Sidney Toler, goes through his paces as the internationally known Chinese detective in the "City in Darkness." There will be the customary midnight performance this evening.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

LOUELLA PARSONS

Hollywood, March 1 (INS).—You've seen Paul Muni as the French doctor in "Louis Pasteur," as an English doctor in "We Are Not Alone" and now you'll see him as a Western frontier medico in "Frontier Doctor." Jack Warner yesterday bought the rights to Urling C. Coe's Western novel and Paul will do it as his first picture when he returns from his road tour with "Key Largo." The play closed in New York, but he's taking it on tour.

Paul has been asking for a long time for the privilege of playing an American and "Frontier Doctor." Has Michael Curtiz set to direct. Why shouldn't he go Western with Marlene Dietrich and Jimmie Stewart winning plaudits in "Destry Rides Again" and Errol Flynn and Miriam Hopkins being so much publicized in "Virginia City?" A Western has a 10 per cent better chance at the very beginning to succeed than any other type of story, for it's the most popular movie fare in our theaters.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The Lamarr Trottis welcomed a 6-pound daughter yesterday. Papa is one of Hollywood's better writers; the Anne Nagel-Tom Brown romance looks serious. She and Tom and his family were at the Grace Hayes Lodge; Kathryn Crawford, who was the big moment in several Hollywood gents' lives before she married her millionaire husband and got herself in the headlines, is a Hollywood visitor; Dan Topping motored in from Palm Springs and Sonja Henie gets here today. Talk is that he will take up his friendship with her where it left off in New York; plans were changed to rush Terry Kilburn to Hollywood from Kansas City when the doctor diagnosed his flu as pneumonia. He's in a Kansas City hospital; Pat Knowles not only piloted Al Kingston and Norma Mullen to Yuma yesterday, but acted as their best man; George Murphy is seeking permission to go personal appearancing with 20 dancing girls and boys.

Wonder if it's true that Garbo and Hepburn visited a famous youth-specialist in New York? Madeleine Carroll, who landed in New York yesterday, planes in the end of the week for the preview of "My Son, My Son." She celebrated her birthday, the twentieth-sixth of February, on the high seas; Normie Scott Barnes, Joan and Dick Powell's 6-year-old, is down with the flu; Ed Beloin, Jack Benny's scripter, will marry Lynn Hayden as soon as Jack gives him a holiday; Mrs. James Roosevelt and her brother, Henry Cushing, at the Beverly Hills Hotel; saw Mary Boland greeting Charles Ruggles at Santa Anita Track like a long lost brother; Doris Stein and I wore exactly the same hats—a little John Fredericks model. I wouldn't have minded, but she looked so much better than I did. We had a lot of fun. Hear Mrs. Bing Crosby also has the same chapeau. Maybe we could make a threesome some day; Mrs. David Butler and Mrs. Allan Dwan, both semi-invalids, gave a small club luncheon party at Santa Anita and had just enough to pay for the luncheon after losing the bankroll on a wrong tip.

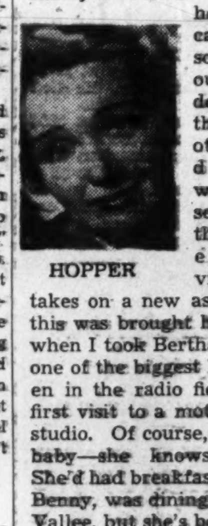

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

Hollywood, March 1.

The reason the grass is greener in the other fellow's pasture and a member of your family isn't a hero in his own home, is because we're so close to our own we don't see them as the other fellow does. But when you see things through the eyes of a visitor, life takes on a new aspect. And this was brought home to me when I took Bertha Brainard, one of the biggest little women in the radio field, on her first visit to a motion picture studio. Of course, radio's her baby—she knows 'em all. She'd had breakfast with Jack Benny, was dining with Rudy Vallee, but she's been so busy in New York that this was her first trip to the coast. And when we landed on the "Waterloo Bridge" set at Metro with Vivien Leigh and Virginia Field doing one of those heart-breaking intimate scenes, Bertha's eyes popped out.

HOPPER

She said: "Why, I just saw her as Scarlett, and never dreamed I'd ever have the pleasure of meeting her. And she's just as simple and sweet as any little girl. And I thought the color of 'Gone' exaggerated her beauty, but now I find it didn't do her justice."

Then we sat down for a chat and both Vivien and Virginia took out balls of yarn and went to work knitting helmets for British soldiers. Vivien was on her eighth. Virginia will probably get a contract at Metro, because she's doing the part so well, and yet another little English girl who was so good in "The Light That Failed," Ida Lupino, turned it down. Guess she didn't want to support Leigh.

Director Mervyn Le Roy told me they were kind of stuck for a girl, and he kept thinking of one he'd seen in "Lloyds of London" but didn't know her name. He was dining at Dave Chasens. And at that moment Virginia Field walked through the door. He said: "There she is. That's who I want." And that's how she got the job.

On to the "Thomas Edison" set, with Clarence Brown, who's never been so enthusiastic about anything, showing us through the set. They were doing the scene where Edison turns the switch which lights up New York City. Even duplicating it in a movie gave you a feeling of watching a miracle, for that's what it is. You don't have to say much about Spencer Tracy's quality—you all know he's got it.

Metropolitan Brings Back 'Girl Friday'

Rosalind Russell and Cary Grant Costarred In Newspaper Comedy

As well it should, "His Girl Friday" returned to the downtown sector at the Metropolitan Theater yesterday to continue the mirth it originally unleashed a few weeks ago at the Earle.

Rosalind Russell and Cary Grant are the principals in this modernized, tongue-in-the-cheek version of Ben Hecht's and Charlie MacArthur's rapid-paced "The Front Page." That doughty, voluble comedy, you will recall, concerned the glories of the ink-stained profession of journalism and how, once in the blood, the passion for "a story" can never be drained out. Hildy Johnson tried hard to leave the city room for a quiet home life and, no matter whether Hildy be a male, as was the case nine years ago, or, as is the case today, Hildy be switched into a female for peppery Miss Russell to mime, does not change things.

Dialogue that is bright, and even occasionally ad libbed, brings swiftness to the farce, and the hair-raising story of a murderer's capture makes the plot of particular interest.

The supporting cast includes Ralph Bellamy, being thoroughly amusing as a home-loving country boy who doesn't understand this newspaper business; Ernest Truex, as a dignified reporter for one of the better journals; Gene Lockhart as a sheriff of dubious morality; Porter Hall and Helen Mack as the unhappy victims around whom the chase revolves.

Look for this eight-page picture section

THE SUNDAY POST'S "Our Town in Pictures" section will interest everyone! Parents of high school students will enjoy seeing what their youngsters do and learn in school. Parents of younger children will see what lies ahead for their boys and girls. High school graduates will be able to compare the present school routine with what it used to be. And every student now in high school will want a copy of this section to look at, talk about and tuck away in the memory book.

What will you find in this section? Pictures, eight full pages of them! Pictures of modern youth in action: learning, talking, studying, doing things. Pictures of the clothes that high school students consider fashionable. Pictures of how a sophomore, a junior, a senior and a high school principal spend a day in school. Pictures of every phase of high school activity.

If you like picture magazines, you'll get a lot of enjoyment out of "Our Town in Pictures" in the Sunday Post.

Suits Set the Style for Spring

The suit shown here on Jean Arthur, of Columbia Pictures, is typical of the new spring fashions. In her Sunday Post fashion article Marshall Adams shows pictures of some of the other suit styles that await you this spring and tells about the new silhouettes and the new fabrics. The styles to be shown a week from Monday at the Connecticut Avenue Fashion Show, being held for the benefit of The Washington Post's Children Hospital blood and serum bank fund, will be similar to those illustrated on Marshall Adams' page in Sunday's Post, so this page gives you a preview of the Easter fashion show.

Will Mrs. Vandenberg Be Our Next First Lady?

If Hazel Vandenberg succeeds Eleanor Roosevelt as the next mistress of the White House it will be a case of one newspaper woman following another. While Mrs. Roosevelt joined the writing ranks only recently, Mrs. Vandenberg's newspaper work was part of her pre-marriage career, a career that has also included teaching and social service work. Hope Ridings Miller's article about this potential First Lady makes fascinating reading. Look for it in Sunday's Post—society section.

More for Your Money in The Sunday Post

Tomorrow's Post, with ten big Sunday sections, offers you more news, more features, more pictures. Here are a few of the features you'll enjoy in Sunday's Post:

Gallup Polls: On the country's present division between political parties, and on the public's attitude toward war loans should Allies be losing.

Special Articles: Personality sketch of Senator Norris as he begins his 38th year in Congress. Story of 30th Anniversary of Federation of Citizens' Associations. Folk Festivals; what they are and why. Joan Fontaine's escape from being merely Olivia de Havilland's sister. And many more.

Columnists: Lucius Beebe, Weare Holbrook, Katherine Brush, Richard Watts, Charles Driscoll, Louella Parsons, Leonard Lyons, Mary Haworth, Harlan Miller, Hedda Hopper, Shirley Povich, Malvina Lindsay.

And a lot more in those ten big sections! You'll enjoy The Post even more on Sunday!

JAPAN: An Accusation and an Apology

"Japan wanted a European war. She thought it would leave her free to grab territory to the south." So states Lord Strabogi, former member of the English Admiralty war staff, in an article appearing in the Sunday Post. The article traces the course of Japanese imperialism, emphasizing the growth of Japanese aggression since 1931. Lord Strabogi believes Japan is worse off as a result of the European war. His Sunday Post article explains why.

The Japanese point of view is set forth in Seiji Hishida's book, "Japan Among the Great Powers," reviewed on the Sunday Post book page by Prof. Gewehr, of American University. He outlines the points brought forward by Dr. Hishida in building up a case for Japan, and shows how wide the gulf is between the Japanese and American attitudes. The Japanese case, as presented in this book and review, will interest everyone watching American-Japanese relations.

Anglo-French Unity

Devaluation of the gold stock of the Bank of France on the basis of the present exchange value of the franc will yield so-called profits which are to be used by the exchange stabilization fund.

This sort of financial legerdemain has become a familiar device, employed by many governments in recent years. Hence, the French action will occasion little surprise and less criticism. It does, however, indicate that the loss in the value of the franc in terms of gold is regarded as permanent. When France's gold stock was last revalued, in November, 1938, a margin was allowed for a possible increase in the exchange value of the franc.

Of more general interest and concern to the United States are other steps being taken to strengthen the economic alliance of France and Great Britain by removing restrictions upon Anglo-French trade and making the two countries less dependent upon outside sources of supply.

Except for licenses and quotas in force prior to the outbreak of war British imports into France will be freed from wartime restrictions and the British will reciprocate. The colonies of both countries will be included in the new arrangement, which may later be extended to embrace certain dominions. Should the war be prolonged, such mutually exclusive arrangements might seriously interfere with the resumption of our customary trading operations when peace returns.

Meantime, the decision of France to resort to food rationing and to cut down nonessential imports will further reduce her purchases of certain classes of American goods, although buying of war supplies and equipment will be greatly increased at the same time.

France, as well as Great Britain, is evidently resolved to avoid inflationary price increases which would result in the "vicious spiral" of rising living costs, increased wages, more price rises and new demands for wage increases. Since maintenance of low prices would encourage consumption of scarce commodities and result in serious shortages, it is absolutely essential to find some method of controlling consumption. Rationing of supplies has, therefore, been resorted to early in the conflict, first by Great Britain and now by the highly individualistic French.

M. Reynaud, the minister of finance, sees in the preparations of France and Great Britain for strengthening their joint economic defenses the beginning of the future organization of Europe for the purpose of a more free interchange of products. There is, however, a vast difference between this defensive alliance for the purpose of waging war, and one designed to expand the exchange of goods in times of peace.

The former is based upon a partially regimented system of domestic economy designed to cut down or eliminate importation of nonessentials. Barriers are raised against neutrals whenever their goods and services can be dispensed with. Concessions are made for the purpose of winning a war instead of encouraging commercial interchange.

It seems doubtful that trading alliances cemented under such conditions could provide a stable basis for a post-war organization of Europe that would meet the requirements of a normal peacetime economy.

Hard-Hit Universities

Whether times are good or bad, American colleges and universities are usually in the throes of a financial crisis resulting from the generous practice of spending more on their students than is received from fees and from returns on invested endowments. Indeed, many institutions have been inclined to regard a deficit as a sign of growth and progress when business is flourishing and donors feeling generous.

In recent years, however, deficits have arisen for reasons for which university managements cannot be held wholly responsible. Institutions which had come to rely upon endowments suddenly found these sources of income drastically reduced because of the depression. For example, 52 colleges and universities which received gifts and bequests amounting to approximately $89,000,000 in the fiscal year 1929-1930 reported a total of only $42,400,000 for the fiscal year ended last June. The latter figure is, however, far above the 19-year low point of $23,400,000 reported for 1933-1934.

The fall in interest rates is another cause of financial distress. According to President Hutchins of the University of Chicago, 40 per cent of the endowment income of that institution has been wiped out by the drop in interest rates, resulting in a large gap between current income and operating expenses. To close that gap, the University of Chicago is appealing to the public for $12,000,000 to cover an anticipated annual deficit of $1,200,000 for the next ten years.

Dr. Hutchins says that the university is not seeking endowments for building, nor planning to expand. The $12,000,000 is needed to replenish exhausted reserves which have enabled it to keep going so far without retrenchments that would spell retrogression. This is a laudable ambition. But the force of Dr. Hutchins' assurances is somewhat weakened by his admission that the university received $8,000,000 in gifts for endowments and plant extension last December. The operating position of the institution, he says, will only be improved to the extent of $100,000 yearly as a result of these donations.

Perhaps the donors of the $8,000,000 could not be induced to let the university use their gifts for the prosaic purpose of financing deficits during the coming ten years. Perhaps nobody tried very hard to convince them of the desirability of doing so. In any case, the University of Chicago, recipient of millions in a single month, is, notwithstanding, hard pressed for money to cover operating expenses. Its plight certainly indicates the need for better cooperation between donors and the institutions which they elect to endow.

The Issue of Sea Power

The visit of Sumner Welles to Berlin coincides with the application of a British embargo on ocean shipments of coal from Germany to Italy. And the coincidence, though accidental, will undoubtedly provide Hitler with additional material for use in the interview he is scheduled to give our Undersecretary of State this morning.

For some time now the German government has been developing the argument that Great Britain's "stranglehold on the economic life of the world" must be broken. This is a new Nazi policy, which never occurred to Hitler while writing "Mein Kampf." But it has a superficial persuasiveness which German diplomacy is eager to exploit. The detention of American shipping at Gibraltar and the search of American mails for contraband are, for instance, cited as evidence that in fighting British sea power Germany is really acting in the interest of the neutral nations.

The stoppage of coal shipments by sea to Italy, which the British navy began to enforce last night, is certain to intensify the German denunciation of England's sea power. Only about one-fourth of Germany's coal exports to Italy normally move overland. The condition of the Reich's railroads will not permit a large increase of this proportion. So Italy will have to look elsewhere, probably to this country, for much of her coal supply. And Germany will lose a trade which has been bringing her much essential foreign exchange.

Many Germans will, with sincerity, believe that this application of sea power confirms the Nazi contention that the British navy must be destroyed and its potential control over ocean-borne commerce eliminated for all time. But neutrals who analyze Germany's methods of exercising power are moving toward a directly opposite conclusion. For when the Nazis speak of smashing the British "stranglehold" they of course imply their intentions to put into effect a naval domination of their own. And neutrals are asking what benefit or promise there would be in this.

To the United States this new development of German war aims is of extreme significance and importance. As long as the Nazi objectives were confined to carving out a "Lebensraum" in central Europe, American interests were not fundamentally affected, whatever the feeling regarding the morality of German conquests. But when it is officially intimated that Germany proposes to overthrow British sea power and substitute a naval control of her own, the implications for America become severely practical.

Since the war of 1812 British sea power has created no serious problems for the United States. It has from time to time aroused irritations, but none which involved either real anxieties or lasting grievances. Nor has the growth of American naval power ever been regarded by the British as a menace to their interests. On the contrary, it is now nearly two decades since London freely conceded to this country a right of naval equality which in effect means American domination in Caribbean, Latin-American and Pacific waters.

A very satisfactory solution of the problem of sea power has thus been reached between Great Britain and this country. For over a century the United States has not been worried about the size of the British fleet. Great Britain has never shown any real concern over the tremendous development of our Navy since 1898. A tacit working agreement, amounting almost to a parallelism of policy, has been established between the two nations with regard to the issue of naval supremacy.

If Germany should upset this balance, as a result of the newly-developed Nazi determination to break the British "stranglehold," it will cause an immediate and profound alteration in our own policies. Such an alteration is indeed already foreshadowed in the revised estimates which our naval experts find it necessary to recommend. But as yet the American people as a whole are not thinking in terms of what a German control of the Atlantic would mean to them.

It is anticipated that Hitler will this morning lecture to Sumner Welles on the German determination utterly to destroy the British fleet. If so, today may prove of great importance in American history. For an upset in the present satisfactory balance of naval power in the Atlantic is not, and cannot be, a matter of indifference to the United States.

Argentine Trade Ties

The last issue of Commerce Reports, published weekly by the Department of Commerce, contains a very illuminating analysis of Argentine foreign trade for 1939. The effect of the war upon the import trade is reflected in a rise of shipments from the United States to Argentina during the last four months of the year, with December totals showing an increase of 48 per cent in value over the figures for the preceding year. Concurrently sharp declines occurred in imports from European countries.

By December, purchases from Germany were only one-ninth those of the previous December. Imports from France were not much more than one-fourth as large as in the preceding year, while Belgian imports had been cut in half. Trade with Italy and Japan, which had declined drastically before the outbreak of war, remained at abnormally low levels. Shipments from Great Britain were better maintained, showing a recovery from the very low levels of October and November.

Despite these wartime trade shifts, which benefited our export trade to some extent, our year-end gains by no means offset the heavy declines in our sales to Argentina during the pre-war months of 1939. Our exports to that country for the entire year, in fact, fell well below the totals of 1938. The Department of Commerce explains that during the first half of the year the restrictive exchange policies followed by the Argentine government severely handicapped American shippers and made it impossible for some products to enter the Argentine market. Although the outbreak of war brought a relaxation of these restrictions, it is reported that at the end of the year many lines of American merchandise were still prevented from competing on equal terms with goods coming from certain other countries.

The chief reason for the discriminatory treatment of our products, which has brought heated protests from American industries, is readily discernible from an examination of Argentine export statistics. In 1939, Great Britain took 32.9 per cent of all Argentina's exports, while the United States took only 11.9 per cent. In 1938, Great Britain's share was 32.8 per cent; that of the United States, 8.5 per cent, not much more than the amount bought by the Netherlands and considerably less than Germany's proportion of the trade. Yet as a seller to Argentina we are a close second to Great Britain, with all other countries trailing far behind.

Such figures throw a great deal of light upon the reasons for the breakdown of trade agreement negotiations between the United State and Argentina. It is evident that the trading ties that bind Argentina to the continent of Europe and, above all, to her most important customer, Great Britain, are of paramount importance.

The pressure which we are able to exert to secure better treatment for our products is slight compared with that which Great Britain is able to exercise, because the British purchase several times as much from Argentina as they sell to her, whereas we are currently selling a good deal more than we buy. Any politically feasible trade concessions which we might make to Argentina would at best be a very minor compensation for her loss of European outlets for her products. For during the past three years about 60 per cent, or more, of all her exports have been taken by six European countries.

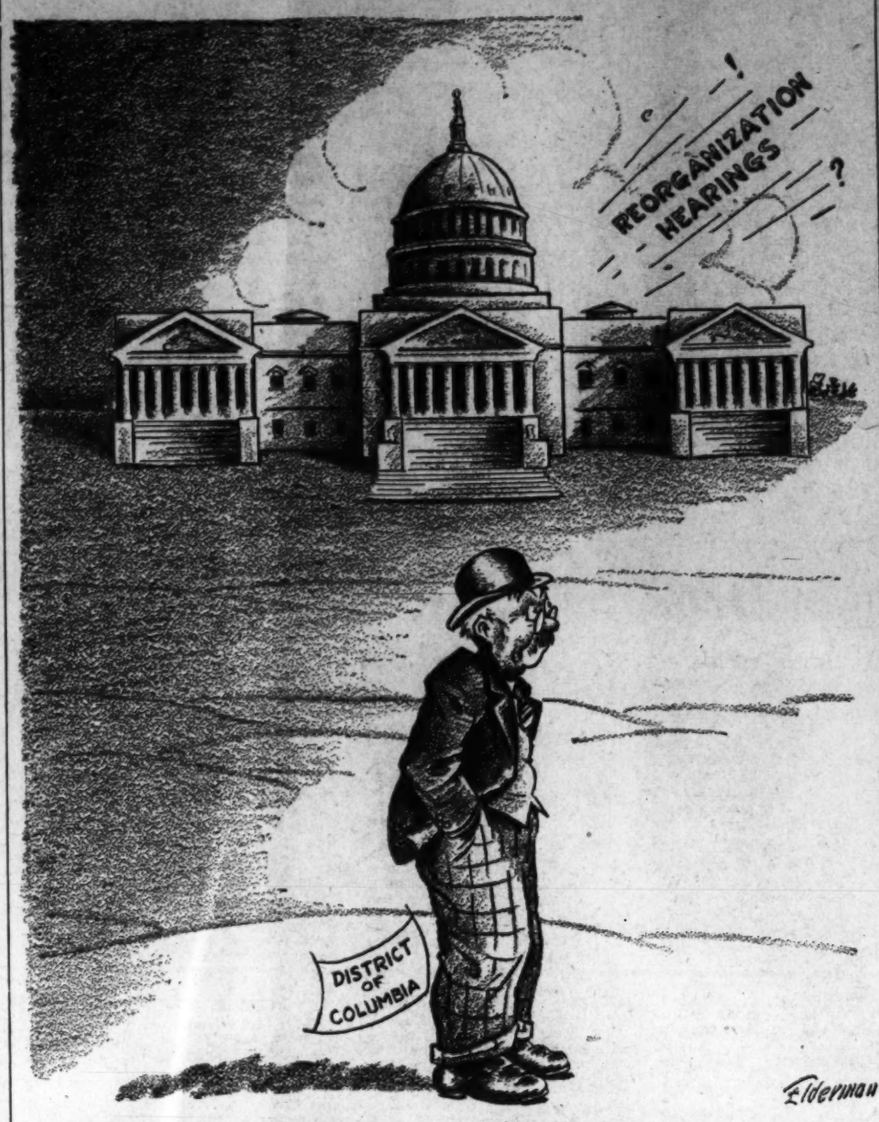

The strength of these trading ties may be temporarily weakened, but they are not likely to be broken by the present war in Europe. Allied belligerents and neutrals alike, moreover, will make every effort to maintain their contacts for the duration of the war.

Helping Finland

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I certainly am glad to see that an organization has been formed to collect fighting funds for the Finns. What is this fear of involvement, this neutrality that causes us to lean over backward in its observance? That causes us to beach our ships and only lend money to a sovereign nation, whose credit is the best in the world and not restricted by the Johnson Act, under conditions that make it almost useless in their present emergency?

Is this form of neutrality the result of propaganda on the part of a minute section of our people, who are either Communists, Hitlerites, anti-British or just plain pacifists? All banded together for entirely different reasons yet getting results? Their favorite crack is "it will be the first step toward war," entirely failing to realize that a cowardly neutrality when dealing with governments like those of Germany, Russia or Japan is the first long step toward war.

Hitler, Stalin and the military faction in power in Japan only understand force, and a weak-kneed neutrality is taken by them to be an indication of weakness and fear. A misguided youth booing the President is interpreted by them to mean that a majority of the American young people are either Communists or pacifists. Their mistaken conclusions lead them to commit excesses that may bring us into war. FRANK MACK.

"Youth Aliyah"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the past months, the theaters in this city have been used for benefit performances for Polish, Finnish, Chinese, etc. refugees.

There is one group, which is sadly in need of help, which has been overlooked. That is the Jewish refugee children of oppressed Germany and Poland. If moneys would be raised through these theater benefit performances, these children would be saved horrible deaths. Everyone knows, regardless of race, creed or color, that children are backbones for nations.

There is a group in Washington who have a project called Youth Aliyah. With large sums of money they remove these children from the oppressed countries. Enormous sums have already been spent and thousands of children's lives have been saved. "SELMA"

Census Questions

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The discussions of the census questions appearing in the press in the past few weeks might suggest that everybody in this country is living in a dark vault—that no one knows anything about the other man's business. This, of course, is contrary to fact.

Everybody knows or imagines he does. The census is designed to convert imagination into fact and to make it possible for every person in the country to know more about the country. After the census is taken, he may not know anything more about his neighbor, but he may know more about how many neighbors he has and how he stacks up with the average of his community.

As a matter of fact, we all live in houses of glass; that is, houses with many windows. Every person who borrows money (and who has not?) must lay bare to somebody about all of his secrets as to his assets and prospects. The local storekeeper, the department store in which you have a credit account, your local banker, your physician, your employer—and who does not know?

The assessor, the income tax collector, and the social worker all together know you all from the lowest to the highest income receiver. Your insurance agent and your physician do not stop with recording your financial position but record your most personal secrets, and your name is attached to each and all of those records.

The census only asks for certain information that many people want—not about you individually—but about all of you in communities—the county, the State, the Nation.

We have come a long way since the first census was taken. At first, it was considered to be a curtailment of personal liberty to ask the names and ages of the members of the family. Some still object to giving their ages, but census after census has added more and more questions. As the Nation becomes larger, the Government is asked to do more and more for the people. And more facts are needed for the public consideration of problems. O. C. S.

Against The Hatch Act

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Hatch bill is now functioning as a law. Opposition to this bill does not arise out of the mere fact that employes of the merit system are barred from political activity, but it has destroyed the last vestige of American rights and heritage.

Is the Government employe to be recognized as a member of the caste system and as such to be victimized? The Constitution of the United States and the Bill of Rights have been swept away to protect the legislators who fear the power of the great army of Government employes. They know only too well the potency or organizations that can secure the measures that work for the benefit of the employes.

States' rights are no longer evident as they were destroyed in 1864 and 1865 and the years afterward when troops and carpetbaggers raped the South, but the States must awaken to the fact that their last stronghold will be swept away the moment that the Hatch bill becomes effective in their domain. This will give the necessary pretext for complete domination of their governments and the establishment of the supreme Federal council as was the dream of Alexander Hamilton.

No Government employe wants to stand in fear of political intimidation, but at the same time he does not want to be trampled upon and have a big policeman say, "Shut your mouth. Silence. This is the hall of sanctuary."

In the name of democracy and of common sense let every individual awaken to the fact that each year added restrictions are crippling the functions which are normally his. If Congress is so vitally interested in the welfare of the employe why do they deny the increases to relieve a situation which needs remedy, or why do they not act to remove the deplorable personnel situation which is in evidence?

Business does everything possible to better the conditions of its employes and the Government has set up a maze of agencies to tell them how to run their business, but the Government has sorely neglected the interests of the employes.

Government servants, I feel, should not be permitted to participate in organizations supporting political parties but they should not be denied the freedom of speech which was given to them by sword, fire and blood and is the inalienable right of every American citizen.

Poll Taxes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The poll tax issue seems to be up again. There is one concrete fact in connection with it of which I do not believe your editorial writers are informed.

There was considerable agitation north of the Potomac for repeal of Southern poll taxes in early 1938. It was, in the language of one of your writers, "of all the New Deal movements least traceable to the White House."

It resulted in the placing on the ballot of the State of Arkansas in the general election held in November, 1938, a proposal to repeal the poll tax. The repeal proponents were pretty active; the opponents less so. The issue was thoroughly aired by newspapers, radio and stump speeches.

In the general election, participated in by Democrats, Republicans, Socialists and Communists, white, black or any other color, the vote was: Against repeal of the poll tax, 83,000; for repeal, 42,000.

The election was so fair, the issues so thoroughly discussed, the vote so decisive that repeal proponents made admission afterward that they simply were on the unpopular side of the question. They never made the slightest claim that the election did not express the wishes of the people of the State.

Hereafter, would you mention that the repeal question has already been voted on in one Southern State, and that the people of that State, who know their own problems best and who, under the Constitution, are entitled to settle them themselves, rejected repeal 2 to 1? ARKANSAS VOTER.

Will 1940 Decide?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Security Administrator McNutt in an address says the Republicans "have misjudged the temper and intelligence" of the American people on domestic security.

"They know that no one likes to pay taxes, so they think the Americans are willing to let their country slide downhill just to save their pocketbooks," says this prolific New Deal orator.

But when the country, on balance, has slid downhill at an alarming rate in spite of the loss of their pocketbooks and their shirts, how about the "temper and intelligence" of the American people, Candidate (If-Franklin-doesn't-run) McNutt?

Will 1940 decide these issues in a natural way or will the debt limit be raised to provide the frogskins to direct this far-famed "temper and intelligence" along proper channels? Sans interference by those horrid Republicans. J. WINSTEAD.

Middle-Aged Baby

"A middle-aged baby," the magazine article said, "is one old enough to get into things, but still too young to be reasoned with." The writer of the piece recognized the deadly potentialities of this combination. Nevertheless, she advised harassed parents to avoid the word "No." Say "No, no, no!" to the growing child and he will come to regard his parents as forbidding ogres, she warned. Better far to have a half-furnished house for months on end than your child a set of complexes for life.

If we could have a half-furnished house, we would gladly settle for that figure. To avoid saying "No" to our middle-aged baby we would, however, have to live in a cement igloo furnished only with sleeping bags. For our Kit at the dangerous age of 15 months has the curiosity of the Elephant's Child, the strength of Samson, and the determination of the Iron Chancellor. He also has a touch of Raffles.

Any latch is to him a challenge. Doors—street, closet, and cupboard—were made to be opened. He developed his technique by opening and shutting one particular door for two weeks straight. After that, he was ready for any obstacle. Drawers are easy, intended to be pulled out and left to bark the grown-up shin. Windows, contrawise, he believes should be closed. Fortunately, this isn't August or we'd be sweltering.

With this knack of his, nothing can be shut away. Given leeway and time, he would not only get that little Limoges ashtray or the freshly laundered dress shirt but also the cleaning fluid and the canned heat—which would go harder with him than a complex.

We're conventional people, so our bookshelves are not built on stilts. Many a fat volume is within Kit's reach. Bathtub faucets in our house are installed at the customary height—which Kit finds handy. Oven doors and gas jets have the same delightful characteristic. There is also the typewriter which is used as much as the cookstove. To dispose of either would be impractical.

To Kit, the typewriter is a magnificent noise-maker, particularly when he whams down hard on a bunch of keys with a little cloisonne jar he reserves for that purpose. Singh-Singh's hillmen would quail before that sound effect.

If it failed, incredibly, Kit could turn the piano on them. We don't find his pounding on the keyboard terrifying, but they would. Modern music has given us a taste for dissonance. As long as he pushes down the keys, we don't object. But he likes also to push them up in an effort to wrench them right out of the keyboard. That practice we feel compelled to discourage.

What the authority on middle-aged babies would advise us to do about tables and chairs we don't know. Kit dotes on pushing chairs around and over, occasionally cracking not only a spindle or two, but also his own noggin. I suppose a set of handsome hassocks would be her solution.

There's a slipper-seat in our dining room which he finds equally satisfactory to shove. We think he's training to be a piano-mover when he grows up. In manhandling furniture he already has the professional touch.

His most terrifying performance is a simple one: He gets a firm grip on a table leg and shakes. Whatever is on the table—perhaps it is set for dinner since we do have to eat, baby or no baby—dances as if before a storm at sea. The salad surges and the salt is spilled. In time, the table leg itself would weaken and collapse if we didn't yell, "No" in a tone close to hysteria. Anything quieter doesn't register.

Until Kit began to roam, we didn't realize how much electrical equipment is low-slung. There's the radio with knobs to be pulled off, if possible—and the little lighted dial which he persists in trying to poke through with a grimy fat finger. There are the lamp, iron, toaster and telephone cords.

The telephone box is a gadget he much admires. When he whangs it resoundingly, he can make a little buzzer sound inside. Some day, in his enthusiasm, he's going to knock it off the wall. In that case, I'll refer the telephone company to the writer of that article.

She's going to hear from our landlord, too. Kit likes to see the window frame slide to rest because, I'm convinced, he wants to open the window his way—by breaking the glass. Until he's stopped by firmer tactics than a mere "No," he contentedly whacks a window pane with a good stout block. Some day the glass will give way. We can only wait.

He has another trick with a window pane that is less threatening to the glass, but even harder on our nerves. They're going to give way, too, just as inevitably. He likes to get a fork—the silver drawer is a snap, of course—and scrape its prongs down the glass while the resulting rasp sends quivers up our spines. The thunder of drums would be a glad relief.

To Kit, our tremulo of no's is just the obbligato to his fun. He doesn't mind them at the least, in both senses of the word. If he has come to regard us as ogres, then his smiling confidence must indicate he sees himself as Jack of the Beanstalk fame who was also called the Giant-Killer. His motto is "The bigger they are the harder they fall." When he finishes demolishing the piano, he'll probably turn on us. Who's forbidding who to do what? AUDREY WALZ.

'Voluntary' Unions

I WANT TO PUT my finger on the fraud in the contention that the American Federation of Labor and the C. I. O. are voluntary associations. It is true that their component or subsidiary organizations adhere voluntarily to the national bodies, but the argument is intended to suggest that the individual worker also enjoys the right to join or refuse to join. That is a deception amounting to a deliberate lie.

The truth is that both the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. unions claim a right of compulsion over nominally free citizens, including a taxing power and the right to ostracize nonjoiners from their lawful occupations. And both invoke the authority of the United States Government under the Wagner Act to enforce this compulsion.

At this point, for the purposes of this essay, I am going to forget the C. I. O. and concentrate on the A. F. of L. The C. I. O. will keep, but I have been discussing the activities of criminals in A. F. of L. unions lately, and the counterattack has been coming from that quarter.

Membership in A. F. of L. unions is not voluntary. Thousands of Americans are compelled to join and pay outrageous initiation fees, high dues and frequent assessments, and the Wagner Act legalizes this obvious abridgement of their rights. By delivering them over the Federal Government places them under the rule of the unions. It also recognizes the right of the A. F. of L. to limit the number of American citizens who may work at various occupations and the number who may learn occupations by serving as apprentices. It even permits some A. F. of L. unions to create and maintain groups of Class B workers in a status comparable to that of the captive Czechs under the rule of the Nazis. These groups are composed of conditional members, who must pay tribute to the unions for the right to work but are not allowed the right to vote.

Nobody in the American Federation of Labor, from William Green down to the foulest racketeer in the dirtiest subsidiary, which would be a tossup between Willie Bioff and Nick Circella, the Capone gangsters, of the movie racket, and George Scalise of the Building Service Workers, will dare dispute any of the contentions which I have made. They are true and provable, and the facts would be bad enough if Green and the other national authorities of the A. F. of L. had shown the slightest sign of an intention to chase the vermin out.

BUT THE FACTS are the worse for the reason that the national authority has not done anything to help the rank and file workers to get rid of such reprobates. The national leaders all claim to be devoted to the cause of Labor with a Capital L, but consider it none of their business to protect the dues-paying toiler from the rule of known gangsters. And some of the subsidiary organizations have even had the effrontery to adopt resolutions deploring the exposure of the vicious character of grafting unioneers.

Bioff's selfless devotion to the cause of Labor with a capital L in a job to which he never was elected may be judged from the facts that he has accumulated riches in a few years on $110 a week in Hollywood, where living is expensive, and took a de luxe cruise on the Normandie at a cost of $2,700 for two in the winter of 1938.

When Scalise, another rehabilitated panderer, went to Florida recently to confer with Green on problems of Labor with a capital L he paid $20 a day for his room, and the clothes in which he stood were the product of the most fastidious tailors and haberdashers in New York. He stood about $350 on the hoof, which is about as much dollarage as it is possible to pile onto any one man unless he is wearing multiple layers of clothing. He gets $20,000 a year in a job to which he never was elected, and all his vouchers are honored without question out of the little earnings of 100,000 elevator boys, window washers, scrubwomen, chambermaids and the like. His expenses are unlimited.

I SAID I COULD name a hundred men in the leadership of the A. F. of L. who have criminal records, and I can. I can also name some other unconscionable grafters who have robbed the workers for years but never have been molested by the national leadership, although their thieving has been notorious and a disgrace to the labor movement.

If the A. F. of L. claims the right by law to compel people to join and pay it has a compensating obligation to keep its leadership clean, and this is not conceding that the Government has any right to compel anyone to join and pay taxes to any private organization.

Now is the time when artists should busy themselves devising new and original forms of gravestones. A wide field is opening for their talents. Tax Bureau Greeting

"A State income tax department is reported considering a suggestion that it cultivate the good will of the taxpayers by sending them Christmas cards every year."—News item.)

MR. TWITCHELL looked at a pretty card. "Seasonal Greetings from the State Income Tax Bureau," was the inscription on it below a picture of a tally-ho. He put on his glasses and read it again. Then he called Mrs. Twitchell excitedly.

"What's this?" he demanded, apprehensively.

"It's a greeting from the income tax department," said Mrs. Twitchell.

"There's something behind it," declared Mr. Twitchell with conviction.

"There can't be anything behind a greeting card," argued Mrs. Twitchell.

"I'm calling my tax consultant just the same," snapped Mr. Twitchell.

II.

"Is this you, Hemphill?" asked Elmer as he rang his tax accountant. "Good! This is Twitchell. I think I had better see you at once."

"It's a communication from the Income Tax Bureau."

"What's happened?"

"Well, what does it say?"

"It just says, 'Seasonal Greetings from the State Income Tax Bureau,'" explained Mr. Twitchell.

"Hm-mm-mm," mused Hemphill. "Maybe you'd better come in tomorrow and we'll look over things."

Mr. Twitchell made the appointment and hung up. He was now quite disturbed. He didn't like that picture of a tally-ho. It seemed too much like the police wagon.

"Always something from those tax departments," he blurted, pacing the floor. "If it isn't one thing it's another."

"But, Elmer, why do you get so excited? You made out an honest return, didn't you?" put in Mrs. Twitchell.

"Of course. But what of it? You have to keep explaining things, just the same!"

"But this is just a greeting card . . ."

"I guess I'll call up my lawyer," said Elmer, grabbing the phone.

III.

"Dodson?" asked Elmer, getting his attorney, "this is Twitchell. Did you get any seasonal greetings from the State Tax Bureau?"

"Calm yourself," said Dodson. "What's the trouble?"

"I am in receipt of a card from the State Income Tax Bureau, sending seasonal greetings. I don't like the looks of it."

"Just seasonal greetings? It doesn't ask any questions?"

"None. What does it mean?"

"I wouldn't want to say without a conference with my partners," said Dodson. "I haven't had any case just like that."

"How soon can you see them?" asked Elmer, anxiously.

"Tomorrow or next day. This is quite new. I once had a case where a Federal tax agent sent a birthday card to a taxpayer and we found out it called for no explanation from us, but a seasonal greeting, well, it's quite new. Suppose you drop in day after tomorrow. I'll have an opinion."

IV.

It was now late at night. Mr. Twitchell suddenly got up out of bed, took off his pajamas and dressed, even to his coat and hat.

"Why, Elmer, where are you going?" asked Mrs. Twitchell.

"I can't sleep. I think I'd better do it," he said.

"Do what?"

"Address a card to the tax bureau, wishing it well. It's just courtesy."

Mr. Twitchell addressed a card, mailed it and went back to bed. But he didn't sleep well.

He couldn't expect to until after those conferences with his accountants and attorney.

Census Questioning

TRUE, QUESTIONS somewhat similar have been asked in past censuses. True, questions even more inquisitorial than these present ones are habitually asked by other branches of the Government, notably the income tax bureau. And it is true that the official responsible for the questions now resented is no New Deal importation to Washington; he has been with the Census Bureau for 40 years; he is esteemed for his work and has high standing with statisticians everywhere. If these questions go too far, it would represent, on Mr. Austin's part, no conscious attempt at authoritarian compulsion upon citizens, but rather a worthy zeal in his function in the Government, and in his profession as a statistician.

All this is true. Many other claims made in extenuation of the new census questions are perfectly true. Nevertheless, the arising of resentment against these questions is a wholesome expression of the American spirit.

THE TAKING of the census is a simple contact of Government with the citizen. In this contact the citizen is not a criminal, nor accused of crime, nor even a witness in any civil lawsuit—he is free from any obligation to facilitate justice. The citizen is not approached in the role of taxpayer—he is free from the obligation which attaches to that status.

The citizen is just a citizen, possessing the maximum rights that any citizen ever has under any conditions. To this citizen's house comes an agent of Government. The agent of Government asks questions. The asker of the questions is a census-taker. The census-taker is just a temporary employe of inferior rank, one who takes a job for a few weeks at a small stipend. Yet this minor Government employe, 120,000 of him, is given as much power and latitude to question the citizen as a judge in a court is given. And the census-taker has behind him the power of compulsion, the threat of fine or jail, if the citizen refuses to answer.

It is said the census-taker will not tell, that he will keep the citizen's answers in confidence. It is a fact that the census-taker is subject to severe penalty if he reveals the information given him, to anyone except his superiors. But it is also a fact that in past censuses there have been scandals in which there was misuse of information by local officials. This purporting to attach to the census-taker the sacredness of one who holds confidences may fairly be regarded with some skepticism.

IN EVERY COMMUNITY there are three persons who have access to personal and family secrets; who are supposed to keep these secrets safe and in practically all cases do so; who are protected by law and custom in refusing to tell what they learn in confidence. These three are the doctor, the clergyman and the lawyer. Supporting these three in their sanctity, and supporting the citizen in his confidence in them, are rigid standards of professional ethics—standards recognized by courts, which will not require these professions to tell what they have learned in their professional relations. Back of the clergyman and the doctor are traditions more than 20 centuries long—in the case of the clergyman a sacred vow, in the case of the doctor a professional oath—which inspire them and bind them, and which give to the citizen confidence that they will keep his secrets.

It is now suggested that the same sanctity may be attached to a census-taker, a man who, usually by recommendation of a local political leader, takes a petty, temporary political job. Whether the citizen will feel as safe with the census-taker as he does with the doctor, clergyman and lawyer—that is one question every citizen will answer readily. His answer will be "no."

Most census questions have always been answered by practically all citizens, voluntarily, as a matter of course. In the 150 years of decennial census-taking, no citizen has caused the Government to prosecute him for not answering a question. In the present list of some 80 questions, it is only two, mainly, that cause the present outcry. These questions are regarded by some citizens as an invasion of the rights of privacy. And if a citizen thus regards any question, he raises an issue that goes to the heart of government and society.

If the right of privacy were understood, in all its implications, and if the protested questions really are an invasion of the right, there should be discussion in every forum of thought in the country. Unfortunately, many do not understand. What the right of privacy is has been forgot by a generation which grew up in an age that took this and other rights for granted, like the air they breathe, and who now must relearn those rights of man and those principles of government and society which were won and established through centuries of constitutional strife and civil war.

The right of privacy is the fundamental, comprehensive right which underlies and includes all other rights. It is the right to individuality, to the dignity and immunity of personality. So far as it derives from any institution, it derives from religion, for it pertains to man as a spiritual entity. It asserts man's relation to God, his basic responsibility to God alone. It is what John Hampden meant when he held, and died for holding, that "resistance to the crown is sometimes obedience to God."

If Germany Wins?

By Livingston Hartley
Special Correspondence of The Post

Dare We Let Her Control The Seas?

THE NEXT AND MORE active phase of the war in Europe, anticipated in the spring, is bound to raise new dangers to American neutrality.

Our neutrality policy has so far worked very well, forestalling any serious threats to our peace and fulfilling its other major purpose of assisting the Allies within the bounds of international law. We hope that it will continue to work as well. But we must realize that it may soon be challenged by new forces, the most dangerous of which appears likely to be our own emotions in the event that an American ship is torpedoed outside the war zone or the Germans carry out massed air attacks upon Allied cities.

No matter how far our feelings are inflamed, they can furnish no adequate ground for the condemnation of 130,000,000 Americans to war. This course would only be justifiable on the ground of national interest, as essential to the preservation of American security.

IF GERMANY is so successful this spring that she appears destined to crush Britain and France, we shall find ourselves face to face with a fateful issue. Can we, solely in our own interests, allow Germany to control Atlantic Europe? Obviously, it would be most unwise to consider this issue only when a decision is forced upon us. Common sense suggests that we should consider it now, bearing in mind the foundations on which our past Atlantic security has rested and seeking to weigh, as best we can, how that security would be affected by a decisive German triumph in Europe.

The first foundation of our past security has been the width of the Atlantic. Although this becomes a less important protection with every increase in the range of warships and bombers and although it is only 1,600 miles in the gap between Africa and Brazil, it is still of great defensive value.

The second has been the divisions of Europe. The continental great powers, facing enemies on their frontiers, have been in no position to undertake large-scale moves against our hemisphere. And such a move by Britain has long been precluded by the situation of Canada.

The third has been British seapower which, exercised from the British Isles and Gibraltar, has shut off Europe from the Atlantic. Now, as in the past, no European fleet can defy the Monroe Doctrine without British cooperation. And Britain has not afforded such cooperation because the Monroe Doctrine has served vital imperial interests, such as trade and investments in Latin America and the safety of the cape route to the East.

IF THE ALLIES win this war, these three foundations of our past security will still stand firm. But if Germany wins the war decisively, only the first of them, distance, will remain. Immediately, the basic conditions of our Atlantic safety will be revolutionized and one long and successful era of American history brought to a close. What sort of an outlook on the Atlantic can we expect then?

A German victory would not be decisive unless it brought the capitulation of Britain, and hence the emergence of the Reich as the future ruler of Europe's waves. Since the British Isles are dependent on the sea for most of their raw materials and two-thirds of their food, they would be reduced to a political satellite of Germany, forced to bow in the future to the will of those who controlled their surrounding waters.

For America, this outcome would mean the loss of the protective cover the British Isles have so long been against Europe. Even if most of the Royal Navy retired to Canada, we should still suffer this strategic loss. In the future we would have to face Europe squarely ourselves in both the North and South Atlantic.

This outcome would also liquidate the past division of European power, as far as the Atlantic region was concerned. No nation on the continent could counterbalance the Reich, unless Russia should ultimately develop the capacity and the will to do so.

To the south, Germany would inherit automatically the strategically placed West Coast of Africa. Here the excellent fleet base of Freetown is nearly 1,000 miles nearer to Brazil than our southernmost Caribbean bases. Unless we could build American fleet bases on the bulge of Brazil, we should be at a serious disadvantage in defending the vulnerable South American sector of our hemisphere front.

SOME LIGHT was thrown on our prospects here by Admiral Stark when he testified before the House Naval Affairs Committee that we could not, on the basis of present programs, count upon defending the Monroe Doctrine against a coalition of Germany, Italy, Russia and Japan.

We could hope that so extensive a coalition would never materialize. But the subtraction of Russia would not subtract much from its naval strength, leaving three aggressive powers whose combined navies are now roughly equivalent to our own and whose partnership of a year ago might readily become an alliance of a few years hence. Italy could not refuse to cooperate closely with a Germany supreme in Europe, and Japan would have compelling reasons to work with such a Germany against us. For Japan has no serious clash of interest with the Reich, but has long had a basic conflict of interest with us over eastern Asia, immigration and the naval mastery of the Pacific.

We could also hope that we could outbid these three powers. But this hope has even less foundation, for it is questionable whether we could, in the long run, outbuild a Germany which controlled most of the shipbuilding capacity of Europe. Our ratio of strength to the three would seem destined to decline rather than increase as the consolidation of Germany's European supremacy allowed her to turn more and more of her energy and new resources toward sea power.

FINALLY, a disquieting feature of our defensive position would be its dependence upon the wholehearted cooperation of peoples less stable than ourselves, South American peoples who are both too weak to defend their own shores and highly vulnerable to ideological sapping. To date this vulnerability has not produced serious results, largely because the predominant European influence in South America has been that of the democracies.

But if Germany attains European hegemony in this war, the influence of Europe in South America will become almost wholly totalitarian. And the claim that the Reich is the creator of a new world order superior to a decadent, outdated democracy will find powerful adherents there, whose influence will be enhanced by German money and commercial policy.

In such circumstances, we should have to expect Nazi or pro-German parties to arise throughout Latin America. Should such parties come into power in any important South American countries, our hemisphere solidarity would be replaced by the balance of power system which has so long imperiled Europe.

Our armament efforts would hence have to be supplemented by power politics, which we would have to conduct with precision and efficiency if Pan-American solidarity were to be maintained. Whether we could function successfully in this new role without modifying the constitutional powers of Congress over foreign policy is questionable.

And we might even be forced to play power politics in the Eastern Hemisphere as well. Facing Germany upon one ocean and Japan on the other, we should find ourselves locked in a two-ocean balance of power, in which outside nations, such as Russia, might play a decisive role. Whether or not alliances with such outside powers would then be necessary to our security is another question we cannot answer now.

IN WEIGHING how a conclusive German victory in Europe would affect our Atlantic security, no account has been taken of its damaging repercussions upon our trade, prosperity and traditional institutions. We do not need to examine these as well to see that a German success this spring or summer which made such a victory appear probable would confront us with as fateful a decision as any in our history.

We should only have two alternatives. One would be to intervene in the war sufficiently to prevent Germany from dominating the other side of the Atlantic, paying the temporary price, however extensive. The other would be to allow Germany to win and pay a price in Atlantic security which would not be temporary, but would endure for as far ahead as we can look.

Appeal For Finland

By The Swedish Intellectuals

'Life Or Death For Northern Europe'

Twenty-four distinguished Swedes of world-wide reputation, including Prince Oscar Bernadotte, four Nobel prize winners, five heads of universities, an archbishop and a bishop, have issued the following to Americans in behalf of the mortally imperiled Finnish Nation.

IT IS A NATION OF intimate spiritual kinship to your own for which we appeal for support. The peoples of northern Europe have given much of their blood to the American body politic and have contributed in the fashioning of your democratic ideas and ideals. For a thousand years the peoples of Finland and Sweden have stood side by side as the northern outposts of Western civilization against the despotism of the East.

Finland's shield is untarnished. Without the slightest provocation, with a barefaced lie as an excuse, the Soviet dictators ruthlessly threw their hordes against a peaceful little neighbor. Never has a cause been clearer; never has a nation fought a more just war of defense than Finland is waging against the rapacious Russian giant. This is a struggle of life and death for the people of Finland and all of northern Europe.

To be incorporated in Soviet Russia's "living space" signifies not only the loss of freedom and independence for a conquered state. It means a complete annihilation and extermination of its spiritual and political leaders and the guardians of its entire social organization. For large masses of the people it means deportation and exile, living under terror, or death. For a conquered people the Soviet living space represents the graveyard of national culture, the chamber of death itself. Finland's defense against Soviet aggression involves more than the fate of its brave little people, more even than the continued existence of Finland and Scandinavia.

WE ARE FULLY AWARE that the overwhelming majority of the citizens of the United States have strongly condemned the unprovoked attack upon Finland and that her superlative efforts are being followed with the deepest understanding and sympathy. We are also cognizant of the first steps towards assistance which have already been taken.

We direct this appeal only to arouse your people to a full understanding that in this instance there is great danger in delay. Through miracles of bravery, endurance and self-sacrifice, Finland's heroes have hitherto been able to prevail against tremendous odds.

But steadily and relentlessly the Soviet leaders are massing fresh forces against the Finnish fronts, while whole fleets of bombers daily scatter death and destruction over the peaceful and unprotected countryside. Women and children are exposed to murderous persecution. The blood of the innocent cries to the heavens. Speedy help is imperative.

ALL THE PEOPLES of Europe, however, are sorely encumbered by the war among the Great Powers, which is also in progress. In order that Finland may be saved from extinction and may achieve a fair and secure peace it is essential, according to our view, that the people of the United States put all the weight of which it disposes as a neutral great power into the balance for Finland's just cause.

In one lightning flash the drama of Finland's struggle against barbarism and anarchy has revealed to the world where the most serious threat to Western civilization is to be found and how the most profound elements of our whole Christian culture are imperiled. Conflicts over economic interests pale into insignificance in comparison with this battle between justice and violence. The Finns have ventured all possessions and honor, life and blood, in their firm belief in the final triumph of justice and mercy over force and hate. For the moral health of the whole it is essential that their faith be sustained.

Copious testimony gives evidence to the fact that all peoples of Europe and the Americas are deeply touched by Finland's heroic stand against the brutal aggressor and that all peoples deep in their hearts and souls long for peace. We are convinced that a joint effort on the part of all civilized states for the victory of Finland and Christian civilization can become the power to check Europe's advance towards chaos and establish peace on earth.

Therefore, we submit this plea: Come to the assistance of Finland soon and in every way possible.

The Tension In Slovakia

By A. R. Parker

Mach's Visit To Berlin

Belgrade, March 1.

MEMBERS of the considerable Slovak minority here, who watch events in Bratislava attentively, are showing great interest in the Berlin visit of Sano Mach, young fiery propaganda chief of Slovakia. It is pointed out that Mach, not even a member of the Slovak government, is being received with remarkable ceremony in Berlin.

That tension existed between Parliament and the Hlinka Guards in Slovakia had been known here for some time. At a secret meeting of the Hlinka Guard chiefs on January 10, resolutions were passed favoring the dissolution of Parliament, the setting up of an authoritarian regime and the purge of the so-called "Czecho - Slovaks" from public service. When news of these resolutions reached Bratislava, parliamentary opinion was deeply indignant and in clerical circles particularly, the opinion was expressed that the Hlinka Guard radicals were the real enemies of Slovak independence.

THE POLITICAL LEADER of the 180,000-strong German minority, Herr Karmassin, who holds the position of state secretary, and has peculiar opportunities of consultations with Dr. Arthur Seyss-Inquart and Joseph Buerckel, responsible in Vienna for Slovak affairs, supports the Hlinka Guard thesis and has lately complained bitterly in Parliament about the laxness of the Slovak government's control of provincial opinion.

There is little doubt here that should Germany wish to make Slovakia a military base in another eastern adventure, the present regime would be replaced by an open military dictatorship in which Mach, who has never disappointed the Nazis, would play a leading, if nominal, role.

Madame Delia Royal Dressmaker, Optimistic Over British Women Dropping Mannish Military Attire for More Feminine Things

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

Fabrics and colors of distinction went into these coutourier gowns created by Mme. Delia, British court dressmaker, now visiting Washington. The Hindu gown, worn by Mrs. Nelson Chase (at right), is called "Sapphire Etoile" because of the intense sapphire coloring of both the crepe and sequin trimming. The sari scarf, really a train in disguise, can be worn in versatile ways. Many of Mme. Delia's gowns are designed for the matron. Mrs. Margaret Rhinehart (left) wears the "Impiretrice" (emperor's wife) gown with bands of Chinese nontarnishable gold embroidery against black taffeta TROUSERS and military uniforms, which broke out like the hives among British women with the first guns of the war, have lost their appeal. Women who donned military or mannish attire with the ruffling of drums are now chafing to get back into the soft tweeds and robes de style which are inherently dear to the English woman's heart.

Marshall Adams

These are the observations of a coutourier well known to Washingtonians—Mme. Delia, of London, who arrived here recently after a hectic transatlantic hop. The gentle-voiced Delia looks less like a British subject fresh from continental hardships than anyone imaginable, for she is full of optimism for the speedy close of the war and for the return to more beautiful dressing.

"The real fashion news from London," Delia confided in her Mayflower suite, "is that women are not only bored with being regimented in uniforms, but they are already coming out in the open with their desires for pretty things. They are ordering them, too, in the hopes of an early spring for fashions. Even staid west-enders who are regulated into uniform, change into bouffant gowns upon the slightest provocation. In Paris, however, many women still wear the street-length "restaurant suits" or ensembles with a slight March Militaire theme."

As for Mme. Delias' own collection of English designs fresh from her shop in Bond street, where she is established as royal dressmaker, there is not a brass button nor yard of soldiers braid. There is an absence of those over-publicized cash and carry pockets, and instead, many soft ruffles, fine handwork, intricate drapery and rapt attention to finesse of fabric and detail. Her collection suggests treasures from Britain's far-flung empire with Hindustan silk paisleys and exquisite jeweled miniature lapel ornaments from India; blouses of hand-done Irish crotchet, and solid gold leaf embroideries for cocktail jackets from China. Mme. Delia herself, who made friends last summer on her visit here with Queen Elizabeth, wears a beautiful trinket—not for sale—a diamond royal crest presented to her by the Court of St. James in recognition of her designing talents.

Your Figure, Madame!

Thin Girls Need High Vitality From Exercise, Walking Will Aid Appetite and Tone Muscles

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU are a too thin girl, you probably take no interest in exercise and very little in food. The way you figure, you are too thin already—so why exert yourself to exercise!

But exercise is more important to the underweight than it is to the overweight! Your lack of poundage means that you are under par physically, but it isn't fat you want to load on your shoulders. You want a higher vitality, a better digestive system and more organic power. In order to get them, you must plan for exercise.

Vitality is not in the muscles. It is in the organs. But the only way the organs can be developed is through use of the muscles. The ideal exercise for the thin girl is outdoor activity, such as ice skating, roller skating, bicycling, or just plain walking.

Usually you thin girls are thin in the places where you wish you were curved. It takes specific exercise to fill out the hollows in the neck, straighten the shoulders and develop the chest. The thighs and lower legs are also apt to be problem measurements for the thin girls.

Take Exercise Easy

You can't expect to sit around and get a beautiful figure. You can take exercises at home or with a gym class, or take up ballet, swimming, archery, or fencing for your figure proportioning activity. When you take your exercises at home you do not have supervision, so remember that relaxation is extremely important.

Don't go through your exercise at a furious pace, building up tension! After you have finished an exercise, shake all the tension out of the muscles. Shake the arm or leg until it is loose and limber. And let go with all your muscles between each exercise. Following exercise, cover up with a warm blanket and relax completely for 30 minutes.

Your exercise program will give you a much better appetite, so see that you get the foods that will do you some good. If you eat too many rich foods and neglect to get your fruits, vegetables and dairy products, you cannot assimilate what you eat. You are leaving out the minerals and vitamins essential to proper nutrition. Food cannot be turned into material for the body cells unless it is assimilated.

You Can't Skip Meals

To gain weight, you must have extra calories. You can't afford to skip a single meal—especially breakfast! To create an appetite for breakfast, take a short walk before you eat. If you go to business, walk part of the way to work—not at a trot, just leisurely. Then stop at some nice place and have a good breakfast. Of course, this will necessitate getting up a bit earlier, so go to bed earlier the night before.

An excellent way to develop a shallow chest

You should take at least 30 minutes to eat luncheon, and you shouldn't talk a blue streak all through the meal. If you are tired at night, rest a bit before dinner. When you are tired, your digestive system is fagged.

Try to incorporate in the day's menu 1 quart of whole milk.

Enough exercise in the fresh air, specific exercise and 500 extra calories a day will help you to gain a pound a week—and a beautiful figure.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Should Woman Send Worthless, Brawling Husband $50 for Legal Defense, When She Is Deeply in Debt?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: This is an urgent matter. I need an immediate answer. To be brief, my husband is in jail (in another town) for disorderly conduct, assaulting an officer, etc. He has asked me to send him $50 to hire a lawyer, as the judge has refused to get him a State lawyer. I am head over heels in debt to my family (which he doesn't know) and have all I can do to support myself and our daughter.

But just for her sake, I would like to spare him a prison sentence and the stigma of being a former convict, if possible. She writes to him and thinks he is a grand person and well off. I haven't much to offer her and her home life isn't what I would like it to be. I have been hoping for years that he would cut out drinking and help me make a proper home for her. I could hold off my creditors and send him the money. But should I? In a roundabout way, I asked my daughter's opinion and she said if I kept on trying to help him, I might get somewhere.

He was working for the WPA but evidently has lost the job, and probably will have great difficulty finding another one. He is always getting himself in jail, as he is definitely anti-social when drunk and people fear him, but he is harmless as a kitten when sober. He mentions wanting to "beat this case," as he claims he isn't guilty, but I have no doubt he is. He speaks of having a head wound, and says he wants to get well and come back here to live, if he gets free. He was here for Christmas and I had high hopes for him at that time—and now this! The case has been postponed for a month.

Please tell me what to do. Should I try to clear my husband, for our daughter's sake? Or do my financial obligations to my family come first? I am trying to weigh my child's future against my debt to them. And as I am employed, my work is suffering while I worry about what to do. Thank you for any advice.
DESPERATE MOTHER.

Why Abet Lawbreakers In Cheating Justice?

DEAR D. M.: If your husband has been a psychopathic drunkard and irresponsible father for years, never contributing anything to his family's support, he hasn't a leg to stand on in asking you for $50 to get him out of his latest jam. And if your heavy indebtedness to your family is the result of bailing him out of past difficulties of a less serious sort, he has long since forfeited any right to your assistance.

Moreover, if he is guilty of assaulting an officer—(a grave charge, by the way, drawing a stiff prison sentence if proved)—it is probable that the $50 wouldn't clear him, anyway. Then there is the ethical question of whether he should be sacrificially abetted in evading the consequences of criminal conduct, if his wilful misbehavior has reached the point where the lives of others are endangered.

The very gravity of the charge against him leads me to think no court in the land would prosecute the case while denying him legal representation. Certainly the courts of the District of Columbia would assign an attorney to defend a prisoner so accused. But legal customs differ in different localities, and since I do not know where he is detained, I have no way of knowing whether he must hire his own attorney, or whether he is trying deceitfully to high-pressure you out of $50 to be squandered self indulgently.

His avowed desire to "beat the case" has a swaggering implication. It suggests that he is taking little profit from his predicament; that he is callously defiant of law and order, and if this is his attitude, he is unworthy of sentimental championship. The more he is spared the consequences of his folly, the greater will be his inclination to run amuck periodically—and unless he is sharply curbed now, he may involve himself in a more heinous crime eventually.

It is natural that you would want to whitewash his record for your daughter's sake, but I feel that he is already so far out of hand, so lost to reason, that further sacrificial efforts on your part to save him would be made in vain. I think that so far as his ill-starred course is concerned, what is to be will be, and you are powerless to prevent the worst.

I feel that whatever of good repute your daughter is to have must derive from your performance and hers. I feel that out of your own means and resources, you must compensate as best you can for what her father denies her and actually takes from her. Thus I am of the opinion that you would be doing her injury, in a sense, in sending her worthless father $50, when that money is acutely needed to maintain your own credit.
M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Brushes Key Items in Woman's Quest for Beauty

Hollywood, Feb. 29.—Ten brushes should be on every girl's list if she's earnestly in quest of beauty.

Priscilla Lane considers her lip brush the most important beauty implement. She dips a Chinese brush in lip rouge, outlines the shape desired, fills in the outline with the stick itself, then deftly blends with her brush.

Shining tresses with a halo glow are the result of plenty of daily work with a hair brush. Always brush from under up and help to send nourishing blood to the roots by bending over so that the hair falls over the crown.

Wise girls possess three brushes for eye beauty: one for night grooming after make-up is removed, one for brow make-up and one for lash mascara. The first should be dipped in warm castor oil for promoting the growth of lashes and brows.

For a complexion that shines and with nary a pore in sight, nothing equals a soft complexion brush wielded with bland soap and warm water, twice weekly. Bette Davis even massages complexion oils into her skin with a brush.

Jane Wyman upholds her reputation for a beautiful back by a daily scrubbing with a long-handled back brush and soap, or when readying for a backless evening gown uses such a brush with a softening cream.

A powder brush should be lifted out of the luxury class, since one is an absolute necessity to finish off a perfect make-up.

Men Disclose What Features Impress First

What feature does a man see when he first looks at a woman? One is impressed by the shape of a nose, another by the sound of the voice. Their reactions and impressions are as diversified as their appetites for food. To find the solution to the problem, You magazine posed the question, "What do you notice first about a woman?" to ten men who are outstanding in some particular profession. Here are the magazine's findings on the subject:

Christopher Morley, novelist, looks first at a woman's eyes then her nose. Permitted conversation, his attention goes next to the voice—the tone and accent.

John Zinn, business manager of casting talent for Paramount Pictures, says that momentarily he is attracted by a woman's lovely figure, trim ankles, harmonious coiffure, flawless complexion, expressive mouth, pleasing voice. In the final analysis, however, he admits that eyes interest him most. These he thinks reveal the true woman.

Pavel Tchelitchew, famous portrait painter, also admits that the eyes of a woman are her most compelling feature. He is attracted by the unusual structure of a facial contour.

George Platt Lynes, photographer, notices a girl's complexion first. The kind that can hold its own in bright daylight without make-up intrigues him most.

Mainbocher, designer, declares that he never pays any attention to a woman's clothes except in business hours. He says, "I am sure the first thing I notice about a woman is the way her hair frames her face. It's not the texture or color or elaborate coiffure but the way the hair grows out of her head, especially at her temples.

Eddy Duchin, orchestral leader is impressed most by a woman's lower lip. He likes full red lower lips (not the phony kind drawn with lipstick). Throaty, dulcet tones in a woman's voice are his next interest.

Bert Goodrich, designated as Mr. America and Possessor of the Body Beautiful, notices a woman's figure first and after that her teeth and the way she smiles.

Lifts for Lenten Menus

SPRING accessories for foods are quite as necessary as new frills for clothing. Marian Van, a home economist for the Wheat Flour Institute has created some interesting ones that are designed especially for Lenten menus.

A bright new suggestion she gives is for dressing up oysters—one of the most popular of seafoods. She says to serve them in Vienna Rolls which have been toasted to a golden crustiness. Simply scoop out the center of the rolls, brush the edges with butter and toast under the broiler. Serve hot, filled with creamed oysters.

Another idea she gives is for individual casseroles of escalloped fish served with toast wings. White bread is toasted and the trimmed slices are cut diagonally. The "wings" are brushed with melted better and two are placed on top of each casserole with the long side up and the opposite corner of the wing pressed into the casserode mixture.

A spring note for the biscuit topping to fish dishes is chopped parsely. The added flavor is excellent with seafood and the tiny sprigs of green give a pleasing color effect. Just add two tablespoons of chopped parsely to a biscuit recipe using two cups of flour and you'll have the latest in biscuit toppings.

A new tonic of Lenten menus is a cheese-egg sandwich, that is really a meal in itself. Allowing three slices of toast for each sandwich, arrange hard-cooked egg slices on two spieces. Stack three slices on each plate and pour cheese sauce over the sandwich. Then top each with an egg slice sprinkled with paprika.

Barrymores Just Can't Dodge The Limelight

New York, March 1

COLORFUL people are the ones who get spoken and written about. I suppose that is why all branches of the Barrymore clan always are popping out of mouths and pages at us. Old Jawn certainly drew his share when he opened on Broadway in that play, and then partook in all sorts of 4 a. m. romance, comedy and melodrama in a night club.

Alice Hughes

A few nights ago the right-minded ladies hurled something called "A Night in Cannes" (as in sardines) for the benefit of something in dear France, and the guests were supposed to come in beach wear, which might mean a swim suit or a big umbrella. And who got the gasps and whispers but a Barrymore—this time, the lovely Diana, daughter of old Jawn, who failed to keep her stepmamma Elaine away on that fabulous opening night. Diana turned up at this gew-gawed benefit wearing a genuine waiter's suit, spots and all, which she is said to have borrowed from a captain at the Colony Restaurant. So there was the pretty one, getting a lot of attention and no doubt helping whatever it is over in poor, dear France. Ah, the trouper blood of the Blythes boils in any generation!

Then, of course, there was that slight alimony trouble suffered by the second-last Mrs. John, the exquisite Dolores Costello that was. That was nicely settled, for, after all, she is the mother of the authentic John, jr. As soon as this had faded from our eyes, came word that still another Mrs. John-that-was—now Mrs. Harrison Tweed—has completed her memoirs for publication. She was a very beautiful Mrs. Barrymore, too, the literary one. Under the pen name of Michael Strange she once wrote a play called "Claire de Lune," in which Mr. John appeared, I believe. She's Diana's mother, too. Mr. Lionel and Miss Ethel are quiescent, just now.

An attractive blonde woman came into this port the other day, having clacked her knitting needles merrily as the liner poked her way among the submarines and mines. She's Lady Castlerosse, former wife of that rotund Irish peer who writes a gossip column for a London paper. I'll never forget dining with Lord Castlerosse on our last trip to London. The scene was the swanky Savoy Hotel, and spouse Hall picked that night to be on his worst possible behaviour, which is unspeakable. The diner was delicious, and all went well until the coffee and liqueurs. Then I seemed to hear two Lord Castlerosses speaking what they quaintly call "English" over there. I found to my horror that Hall was doing a very fair mimic job on the titled columnist, about half a beat behind.

Pearl Buck's new novel, "Other Gods: An American Legend," hasn't been kissed to death around here. Most people still seem to feel that the talented Pearl's Chinese stories were nearly masterpieces, but that when she moves back to the United States she's just another competent tale-writer.

Even Diana Can't Evade Limelight, Has Trouper Blood

World of Color Is Upon Us With Spring

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THE first robin, the first crocus, for that matter the first foolish little flower hat is enough to put me in a spring frame of mind. What care I that it is still winter for all practical purposes!—I'm off in a world of fresh flowered wallpaper, crisp gossamer curtains, bolts of beauteous chintz.

The color news in the spring refurbishing picture is a lure and an enchantment. Periwinkle is the smart blue, but all the blues are popular, from pastels and slate tones right through to royal. Peacock has more style importance than turquoise, though the latter is still good. Lilac is a decorator color that is the key to many charming effects.

Old rose is a lovely old color that's new again. It ranges from dusty rose to a mauve-rose. At the other end of the line, there are the rusty rose tones that become almost flame color. Straight firemen reds are going to brighten a worried world during the coming months—you will see also wine tones, maroon, magenta.

All the pastels will be deeper and more positive. The yellows, for instance, will be strong and clear and in the greenish family—chartreuse, lemon, canary. The pinks will graduate into coral and shrimp tones, though the pale mauve-pinks and the flesh pinks will continue to be seen. Of the natural tints, fawn, bamboo, chamois, cafe au lait are the favorites. Be ready to welcome many new gray notes in interior decoration, both platinum grays and a warmer pink-gray.

In accent colors, black is way up in front. It's being used with gilt for lamp bases and accessories and for occasional furniture. You will also see it as a background color for ornate floral patterns. Along with plain black, you'll also find a good deal of rusty black or charcoal.

Exnicios' Cocktail Party Welcomes Mrs. Pulver

Capital Resident Home for Brief Visit; Spring Hat Contingent Comes Out; Diplomatic Corps Ladies 'at Home'

Mrs. George Pulver, practically the only person who prefers a scorching summer in Washington to a winter here, was welcomed back to town at a cocktail party given yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios. Mrs. Pulver is here for a few days from Southern Pines, N. C., where she and her husband have spent the last two winters. While in the Capital, Mrs. Pulver is staying in her apartment on the top floor of the home of her mother, Mrs. Alexander Legare.

Though tea is becoming increasing rare at Capital cocktail parties, Mrs. Exnicios had some yesterday for her guests—as well as cocktails, Scotch and soda, tomato juice and sherry. She wore a simple tailored dress with white touches at the neckline. Mrs. Pulver arrived hatless and wearing a fur jacket over her gray wool dress.

Several ladies present confessed that they'd been so depressed by the weather that they had rushed out after that famous feminine antidote for the blues, a new spring hat. Mrs. Kurt Hetzel was wearing one, a very pale pink bonnet with black veiling. She was telling friends about her husband's concert on Tuesday evening, March 26, at Constitution Hall. Dr. Hetzel will conduct the Civic Orchestra and Richard Baldwin, well-known pianist, will be soloist. The latter is a nephew of Miss Katherine Judge, of Washington.

Spring Hats Feature Party

Also among the spring hat contingent were Mme. Edgar Prochnik, who was wearing a black and white number, and Mrs. Harold Sims, on top of whose black hat there perched a pink bird, which exactly matched her necklace.

Mrs. George T. Pettingill arrived after attending one of the Friday rides at Fort Myer. She wore a green jacket with a tweed skirt and a green hat.

Ralph Snowden Hill, who is just up from a bad case of grippe, inspired George Abell to remark that "Ralph may be down, but he's always out."

Peering under an enormous gray hat, guests recognized Mrs. John Caswell, who topped off her gray suit with silver fox furs. Mr. Caswell was there, and other couples included Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock and Mr. and Mrs. William MacCracken, the latter carrying a big red bag to match her straw hat.

Mrs. Randall Hagner was all in brown, with a short fur jacket. Mrs. William D. Thomas, who has been out West, dropped in later, wearing silver fox with her gray sports dress.

Robert Buell, of the State Department, told us he had just returned from Nassau. He had sailed there from Miami in a schooner which a friend of his had made all by hand, the process taking over two years.

Others seen yesterday were Mr. and Mrs. Donald Downs, the latter all in black; Baron James Baeyens and M. and Mme. Charles Lucet, of the French Embassy, who tell us that Mrs. Nathan Wyeth is going to the hospital today for an operation, and Clarence Hewes.

Mmes. Ertegun, Hurban Are "At Home"

Several ladies of the Diplomatic Corps, among them Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador, and Mme. Hurban, wife of the Minister of Czecho-Slovakia, held "at homes" yesterday afternoon. Mme. Hurban's was the last she will give this season.

The guests at the Czech Legation were surprised to find the Minister hobbling about with his ankle in a cast—result of an accident when he was ice skating several weeks ago. However, he told friends that he is well on the way to recovery and would soon shed the cast.

Mme. Hurban wore a black dress, simply made, and trimmed with gold braid. The Minister sat in a chair in the library and people flocked in there to chat with him. The Legation was decorated with spring blossoms—tulips, snapdragons et al.

Among those who called during the afternoon were Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Minister, who wore a silver fox jacket over her black derss, and a tiny black straw hat trimmed with white flowers; Mrs. Carlton Holdrege, who was all in black; the Misses Polly and Anne Randolph, M. and Mme. Prochnik, Mrs. Thomas Burke and Mrs. Esther Bissett Norment.

Mrs. Villaret Gives Tea Party For Mrs. Benet

Washington residents who had known Mrs. Eugene Villaret when all lived in Paris gathered at her home yesterday for a tea honoring Mrs. Laurence V. Benet. Mr. and Mrs. Benet, who now reside here at 2101 Connecticut avenue, maintained a home for many years in the French capital, where they were leading members of the American colony.

The hostess, who is the wife of Lieut. Col. Villaret, wore a floor-length gown of green crepe with a jeweled belt and long sleeves. The tea table was centered with a handsome Rumanian cloth which Mrs. Villaret had picked up in her travels, and a vase of yellow snapdragons.

Among those invited were Mrs. Henry Norweb, wife of the newly named United States Ambassador to Peru; Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Yugoslav Minister; Mrs. Charles McNary, Mrs. Sol Bloom, Mme. Diamontopolous, wife of the Greek envoy, and Mme. Depasta, whose husband is Counselor of the legation; Mme. Imirescu, wife of the Rumanian Minister; Mme. Naoumoff, wife of the Bulgarian envoy, Mlle. Vena A. Naoumoff, his sister, and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, wife of the Federal Security Administrator.

Others asked were Mrs. A. H. Sunderland, Mrs. George Marshall, Mrs. Albert Cox, Mrs. Richard H. Jordan, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Mrs. Henry Flather, Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Mrs. Charles Hendley, Mrs. William Chapin Huntington, Mrs. Guy Johnson, Mrs. Randolph H. Miner, Mme. Cantacuzene, Mrs. Ernest Draper, Mrs. Elise Ellis, Mrs. Carlton Holdrege and Mme. Charpentier.

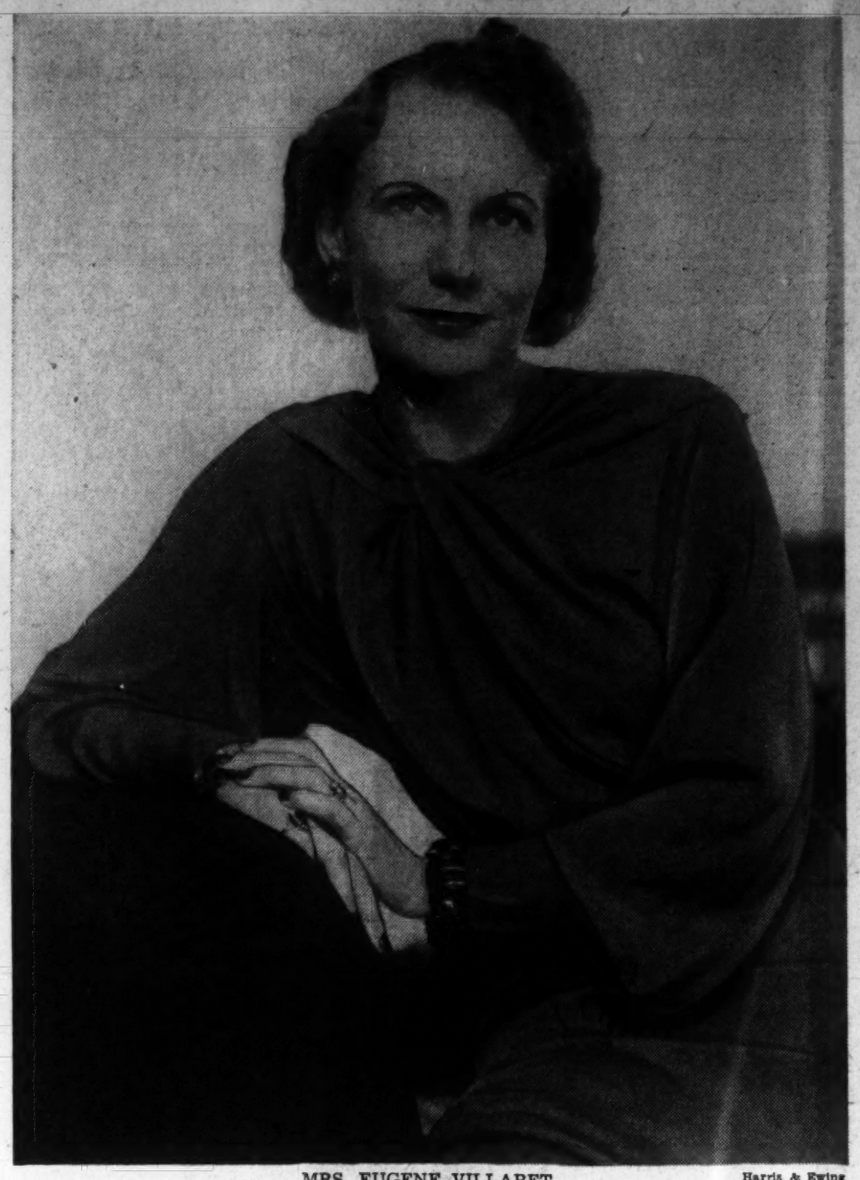

Mrs. Villaret was assisted by Mme. Burja, wife of the Yugoslav Military Attache; Mme. Petrescu, wife of the Rumanian Military Attache; Mme. B. Kleijn Molekamp, wife of the Commercial Counselor of the Netherlands Legation, and Mrs. Lee Murphy.

Mrs. Caldwell And Albert Warner Mark Natal Days

There was a birthday cake with all the accoutrements, and among those who gathered to toast the celebrants were Senator and Mrs. John A. Danaher, of Connecticut; Representative John Kunkel, Commissioner and Mrs. George Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sears Henning, Mr. and Mrs. Walker Buel, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Summers, Mr. and Mrs. Guy McKenney, Mr. and Mrs. Tudor Morsell and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Butcher.

Wednesday Night Dances To Be Resumed in Spring

Committee of Young Women Who Started Series at 1925 F Street Club Decide To Hold Similar Parties in Garden

The committee of enterprising young women who launched the series of Wednesday night dances at the 1925 F Street Club this winter has decided to give a similar series in the spring.

After much consultation with the Hagerstown Almanac, the committee has picked nights for which warm weather is promised, so that after the first party the others can take place in the beautiful garden behind the club. The series starts March 27, and the dates for the others are April 24, May 22, and June 5.

The dances will be held on Wednesday nights, and will be small and early. The committee has announced that they will end positively at 12:30, and that there will be no bribing of the orchestra to continue after that hour.

Mrs. Marshall Exnicios and Mrs. Hugh O'Donnell are moving spirits behind the dances, and are assisted by a group of friends with a passion for anonymity.

The F Street Club has in past years been the scene of very successful spring dances which were organized by the late Viscount de Sibour. The garden was strung with Japanese lanterns and a buffet was set up in one corner, while dancing took place in the inclosed porch overlooking the garden.

French Envoy To See 3 Plays Of His Nation

International Club To Present Dramas Of One Act Each

The Ambassador of France, Count Rene Saint Quentin, will be guest of honor Thursday night at a program of three French plays which will be presented by the International Club in the auditorium of the Washington Club.

Members of the French colony in the Capital, representatives of diplomatic and academic circles and students of French will attend. Because of the limited seating capacity of the auditorium, reservations are to be made in advance at International Student House, 1708 New Hampshire avenue.

The plays are under the direction of Nadia Wilson and Louis T. Achille. Miss Wilson was educated in Switzerland and is now teaching French at American University. Mr. Achille is a native of Fort de France, Martinique, a graduate of Sorbonne and the University of Paris and is now assistant professor of French at Howard University.

The first of the one-act plays will be: "Un Arriviste," or "The Go-Getter," by Miguel Zamacois, which gives, in a farcical vein, the modern version of the satire on medicine dear to Moliere. "Le Luthier de Cremone," or "The Lute Maker of Cremona," by Francois Coppee, is to be the next, a moving drama in verse, telling of the humble tragedy of a hunchback apprentice who was eligible to glory but not to love. "L'Autre," "The Other One," the final play is a modern love story by Albert Dubeux, produced for the first time in Paris last year at the Theater des Arts. In it the wife and the former mistress of a novelist in current vogue, instead of fighting as rivals, establish a friendship as equal victims of the literary Don Juan.

The casts include: Mr. Achille and M. Pecou, of Martinique; Miss Wilson, Switzerland; Miseph Jarry, Paris; Lauren Askew, Brussels; James McDowell, L. T. Neulson, jr., and Elise Hastings.

Chocolate glace and bonbons will be sold in the between acts by Yvonne Dervilers and Charlotte Colladay.

The ushers will include: Miss Gertrude Feliu, of Barcelona; Miss Lois Ing, of Nanking, and Miss Carmen Cruz, of Manila.

The International Student House has sponsored the French group for three years. Plays were given last year and this presentation is in response to popular demand for a repeat performance of this year's plays.

Anna B. Peck Heads Kensington Woman's Club

Elected Successor to Mrs. J. E. Lamb; Two Members of Group Honored As 'Pioneers' by County Federation

By Jessie Ash Arndt
Post Club Editor

Miss Anna B. Peck yesterday was elected president of the Kensington Woman's Club to succeed Mrs. James E. Lamb, who has served for the past two years. The election followed a dessert luncheon at the home of Mrs. William L. Lewis, on Fawcett avenue, Kensington.

Other officers, who will serve for the coming year are: Mrs. Hosmer P. Hartshorn, vice president; Mrs. George F. Ashworth, recording secretary; Mrs. Walter S. Pratt, jr., corresponding secretary; Mrs. John R. Graff, treasurer; Mrs. Lamb, paliamentarian, and Mrs. J. Stealey Elms, librarian.

Two Members Honored

Anouncement was made that a present member and a deceased member of the club had been chosen by the executive board of the Montgomery County Federation of Women's Clubs as two of the county's representative pioneer clubwomen. They are Mrs. Harry C. Armstrong and the late Mrs. Elden Hartshorn.

The selection was made from among names submitted by each federated club in the county of its "pioneer women" as part of the General Federation of Women's Clubs plan of observance for its golden jubilee. These two will be submitted with names from other districts in the State, from which Maryland's pioneer clubwoman will be chosen.

Mrs. Armstrong was selected as the active member who had the longest record of club service and the most outstanding record of leadership.

Mrs. Hartshorn, who died in 1926, was the founder of the Kensington Women's Club and of the Montgomery County Federation of Women's Clubs and also active in organizing the Maryland State Federation of Women's Clubs.

The Kensington club, whose membership is limited to 30, prides itself that two of the women from its ranks should have been chosen among the three pioneer clubwomen" of the county. Mrs B. Peyton Whalen, president of the county federation, was named as the third of the group from Montgomery.

Leader in Community

Although it is small, the club for many years has taken leadership in community betterment.

As one of its major projects this season, it has given assistance to Ken-Gar School for colored children. This has been done through the education committee, of which Mrs. Roy R. Graves is chairman. It has supplied a dictionary; has provided materials for a special art class which Mrs. Lamb, retiring president, will instruct; has given materials for sewing class and, within the next few days will deliver a phonograph and records to the school. There are two teachers and about 75 children, ranging from primary through all of the grammar school grades.

The club feels that its interest in the school will aid the entire community which Ken-Gar serves

Work for Playground

Another project of the club has been a community playground for white children, called the Meadows. Plans were discussed yesterday for taking steps to maintain the high standard set for it when it was established. The clubwomen were responsible for having the land set aside as a playground by the Town of Kensington more than ten years ago. They planted trees and sponsored the entire project in which the Park and Planning Commission cooperated.

U. S. Cafeterias Under FWA, Carmody Says

Concessions Can't Be Sold to Private Concerns, He Avers

Through his general counsel Federal Works Administrator Carmody yesterday told the Welfare and Recreational Association trustees, operators of cafeterias in Federal buildings, that their agency was a Government instrumentality, subject to his control.

At a hearing to clarify the legal status of the association, Alan Johnstone, FWA solicitor, said the association's half-million dollar assets were Federal property. He indicated that the association had no valid contract with the Government, but was only a Federal body permitted by license to operate concessions on Government property.

Johnstone Serves Notice

Johnstone also served notice on private restaurateurs that there was no legal authority to allow private profit-making organizations to take over the association's functions. He revealed that he thought the Comptroller General was on false legal grounds in a recent report suggesting that the present relationship with the association be severed and that private restaurant concerns be allowed to bid for the concessions.

John Cross, association counsel, declined to accept Johnstone's conclusion. He said that in the event of dissolution of the association, he believed its assets might go to various welfare societies in Federal departments. He said it had also been suggested that the members of the association might share in a division of the assets.

Urges FWA Control

Milton Freeman, of the District Council, United Federal Workers, asked that the cafeterias be operated by a board of trustees under direct supervision of the FWA and that "consumer representatives" of Federal employes be placed on the board.

Antonio Bitonti read a resolution of the Adjutant General's Office Lodge, American Federation of Government Employes, asking complete dissolution of the association, and creation, in its place, of a Government agency to run the eating places.

After the hearings, FWA officers pointed out that under Carmody's conception of the association as a Federal instrumentality, no rent would have to be paid to the Treasury, but that the money now being paid for rent could be "plowed back" into improvements or lower food prices.

Dr. Havenner's Condition Grave After Operation

Dr. Geo. C. Havenner, 73, of 2912 Albemarle street northwest, a past president of the Federation of Citizens Association, was in a grave condition in Providence Hospital last night. He underwent an emergency operation for a ruptured appendix early this week.

His physician, Dr. Paul S. Putzki, said he hoped to give Havenner a type-two blood transfusion this morning, and called on Inspector L. I. H. Edwards of the Metropolitan Police for volunteers from the force.

Havenner has been a prominent figure in civic affairs since 1895, when he organized the Anacostia Citizens Association.

100 Welshmen Sing Praise Of Old Country at Party

Bards in Glory at St. David's Society Celebration as National Tunes Are Given in Native Tongue

The rich-voiced bards of Wales would have been right at home in the Mayflower last night, with members of the St. David's Society of Washington.

Nearly 100 members and guests of the society were there to celebrate the anniversary of St. David, patron saint of Wales, and to sing in their native tongue the rousing hymns and marching songs of their fatherland.

They sang together the old Welsh tunes like Aberswyth, and Bryn Calfaria, Rachie, and Huddersfield, and Hen Wlad Fy Nhadau, the Welsh national anthem. And when the diners stopped the songs, their own bards took up the music.

The group heard soprano solos by Miss Margaretta Eckloff and Mrs. A. G. Stone, piano solos by Mrs. Ethel Steele Loke, and songs by the Canadian male septet, whose members included Wilfred, John and William Smith, brothers, Griffith Evans, William J. Hughes, Dr. David Breese Jones and Robert J. Griffith.

The society heard, too, a warning against pessimism and despair in international and domestic affairs from Albert W. Atwood, of 65 Observatory Circle northwest, business and political writer. Despite the war, he said, peace must remain an ideal, and he warned against abandoning the accepted instruments of international relations, such as international law and treaties.

Atwood declared that America is still a land of opportunity, and said: "We should not despair of the framework of our Government as handed down to us by the founding fathers—our Government has lasted longer than almost any other now on earth."

Griffith Evans presided.

Eagles' President Urges Man's Right To Steady Job

More than 100 members of the Fraternal Order of Eagles from Washington, Virginia and Maryland last night heard their Grand Worthy President, John A. Abel, of Marion, Ohio, urge the right of the workingman to a steady job.

"An economic system subject to such drastic ups and downs as ours is a direct violation of human rights—the right of a man to find work that will pay him enough to support himself and his family in decency and comfort," declared Abel.

He cited the Eagles' bill sponsored by Representative Ludlow as a measure "to stabilize employment" with is provision for "surveys" of all economic problems so that the Government can legislate intelligently and effectively."

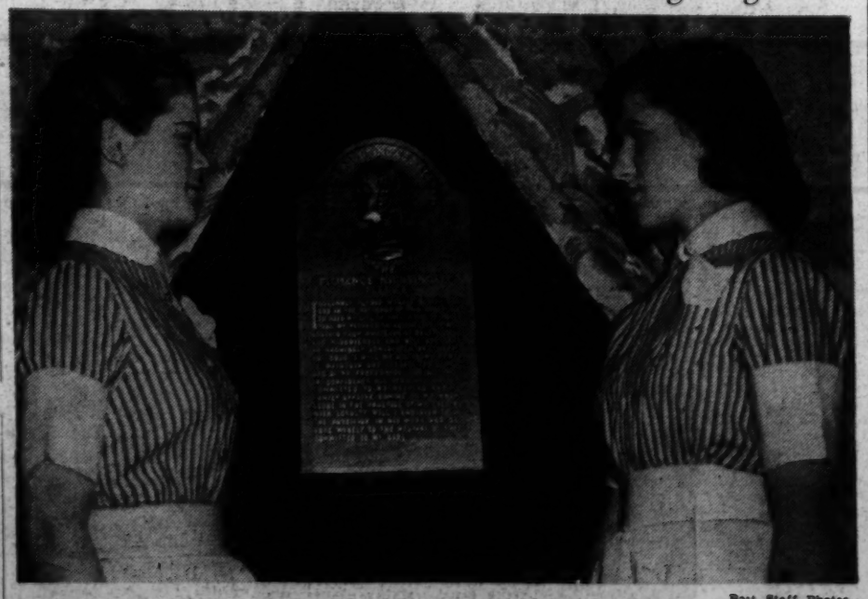

Jobless Over 40 Are Discussed InEpiphanyForum

The unemployment of persons over 40 was discussed at an open forum last night by A. G Nordholm, economist for the wage-hour division of the Labor Department; Alexander Shapiro, personnel director of the Capital Transit Co., and Consulting Economist Karl Karsten. The group met at Epiphany Parish House, 1317 G street northwest.

"People over 40 need vocational guidance as much as youths of 16," Shapiro declared. He pointed out that older people seeking employment might well turn a hobby into a vocation.

Karsten disagreed with the belief that people over 40 can be classified in a general unemployment group. He said that "the person over 40 bears a greater psychological burden than does the youth who cannot immediately find work."

Their 'Constant Reminder' of Florence Nightingale

Post Staff Photos.

ELIZABETH SAUFLEY AND NELLIE ADRIAN UNVEILING FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE PLAQUE

A dedication to the principles of nursing as found in the Nightingale pledge was voiced by nearly 200 seniors from schools of nursing in the District at the unveiling of a Florence Nightingale plaque at Garfield Hospital last night.

The plaque, showing Miss Nightingale's profile above the "pledge" in bronze, on a background of polished walnut, will be hung in the student library at Garfield as a "reminder and constant inspiration to the present and future students of the school," said Miss Margaret Duffy, an instructress of nurses, at the unveiling.

A tableau, depicting incidents in the life of the world-famed nurse was presented by Miss Phyllis McDonough, a graduate nurse at Garfield. Miss Mabel Sherfey, a senior at the Garfield School of Nursing, extended greetings to the visiting senior classes from Providence, Georgetown and Sibley Hospitals. The entire student body of Garfield attended.

Miss Leona Sultan, junior at the school, recited Longfellow's "St. Filomina." A sketch of Miss Nightingale's life was given by Miss Bertha Lonas, a senior. Dr. W. Sinclair Bowen, of the hospital staff, delivered the invocation and benediction.

'Whiners' Hit By Dr. Rustin In Sermon

Mt. Vernon Pl. Pastor Condemns People Who Throw Up Hands

Public indifference to modern social, political, economic and other evils was attacked yesterday by Dr. John W. Rustin, addressing Southeast churches' Lenten rites at the Penn Theater.

The pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church said many Americans were developing a philosophy of life which made them feel "they'd rather not be bothered" about the problem of unemployment, as long as they had a job, nor concerned about war, as long as they were not involved.

Criticizes Whiners

"I don't know any philosophy of life more damning than that," he declared.

Dr. Rustin also criticized people who throw up their hands in despair when troubles and confusion come, and who "whine that the world is going to the dogs, the poor were always with us, and we will always have wars."

He said he was not worthy to "touch the garments" of those small groups of people who, in the face of depression, confusion and defeat, can "see the light." These people will not let anything prevent them from seeing the face of God, he said.

Dr. Sizoo to Preach

Dr. Rustin was introduced by the Rev. George H. Bennett, pastor of Wilson Memorial Methodist Church, who will be this Monday's noonday speaker. The North Carolina Avenue Methodist Church, of which the Rev. Bernard I. Barnes is pastor, will be in charge of the coming week's services.

The Rev. Samuel M. Shoemaker, of New York City, concluded his series of sermons yesterday at Epiphany Church, where Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, pastor of St. Nicholas' Collegiate Church, New York City, will preach on Monday through Friday, at 12:05 p. m. He is former pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church here.

Led by the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, colorful ceremonies here will mark the dedication tomorrow of St. Francis Xavier Catholic Church's new $160,000 parochial school at Twenty-seventh and O streets southeast.

The Rev. Joseph E. Buckley, rector and founder of the parish, will meet the Archbishop at St. Patrick's Rectory, Tenth and G streets northwest, shortly after 10 a. m., and a motorcycle squad of the Metropolitan Police Department will escort them down Pennsylvania avenue and across the new John Philip Sousa Bridge.

Band to Greet Prelate

There the archbishop will be met by members of the Holy Name Society of the parish, the Holy Comforter Boys' Band, and the Fife and Drum Corps and Band of the American Legion, who will escort him to the church rectory at Twenty-eighth and Pennsylvania avenue. Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus will form an honor guard.

At 11 a. m. the archbishop will proceed from the rectory to the school—first to be dedicated in the new Archdiocese of Washington—where he will bless a flag being raised on the grounds, and also bless the new building.

Solemn pontifical mass in the church will follow, with the archbishop pontificating, and the Right Rev. Monsignor John I. Bartett, Ph.D., LL.D., director of parochial schools for the Washington and Baltimore archdioceses, delivering the sermon.

Assisting in the service will be the Right Rev. James Smyth, rector of Sacred Heart Church; the Rev. Charles E. Roach, pastor of Assumption Parish, Congress Heights; the Rev. Leo J. McCormick, of Catholic University, and the Rev. Charles W. Nelson, assistant pastor of St. Peter's Church here. Deacons of honor will be the Rev. John H. Eckenrode, pastor of St. Mary's Church, Baltimore, and the Rev. John D. Collins, S. S., of Sulpician Seminary.

Notre Dame Sisters in Charge

Assistants to Father Buckley at the parish are the Rev. Peter B. Rakowski and the Rev. Harold F. Donovan. Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur, of Ilchester, Md., conduct the school, which at present has five grades. It is planned to add an additional grade annually until eight are acquired.

Archbishop Curley will confirm some 350 children tomorrow at 4 p. m. at the church.

Lumber Truckman Wins Race With Police but Loses Trial

Fined $125 and Given 30 Days in Jail On Charges of Speeding, Eluding Officers, Driving on Sidewalk and on Wrong Side

Pitting his two and one-half ton lumber truck against a police scout car Thursday, James E. Jackson, 31, colored, of Germantown, Md., managed to race across the District-Maryland line in time to leave the D. C. police eating his dust.

But winning a hot chase cost him dearly. In Police Court yesterday Judge Walter J Casey found Jackson guilty of five traffic violations, sentenced him to a total of 30 days in jail, and fined him $125.

Policemen A. G. Keene and E. G. Mowr, in their scout car, said they clocked Jackson speeding up Connecticut avenue Thursday at 55 miles an hour (charge No. 1; fine $25, or 30 days). When the police drove up alongside, Jackson swerved into Livingston street and raced away at 50 miles (charge No. 2; $25 or 30 days). When a taxi driver tried to impede Jackson's progress, the truckman ran the cab over the curb and pushed his own car over the sidewalk (charge No. 3; sentence of 10 days in addition to a fine of $25, or 30 days in jail). Cutting back onto the street Jackson drove up the wrong side of the thoroughfare (charge No. 4, sentence of 10 days in addition to another $25 fine, or 30 days). Jackson drove through a stop sign at Forty-first and Livingston (charge No. 5; sentence of 10 days, in addition to a $25 fine, or 30 days).

Jackson crossed the District line ahead of his pursuers, only to be picked up by Montgomery County officers an hour later as he drove his truck into the Bethesda lumberyard at which he works.

On a sixth charge—that he was operating the truck on an expired drivers' license—Jackson asked a jury trial.

Franz Schumm, Soloist 27 Years In Marine Band, Retires

Musician Doubled As Clarinet Player And Bass-Violinist

After 27 years of making music in the scarlet, blue and gold uniform of the United States Marine Band, Principal Musician Franz X. Schumm has retired.

His retirement will mean no divorce from music. As a civilian, he will continue to divide his affections between the reedy clarinet and the great bull fiddle which, with strange incongruity, he embellished hundreds of Marine Band and orchestra concerts.

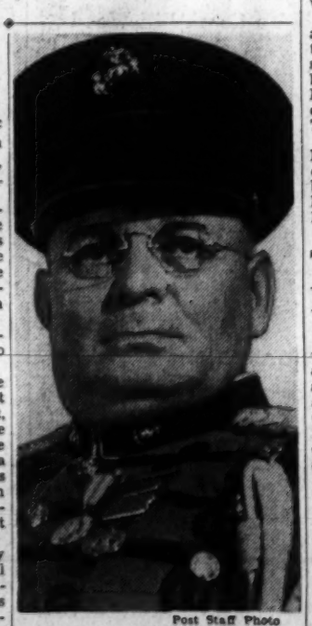

"I love my profession," he explained yesterday, "and I love to teach."

Schumm, who lives with his wife and two daughters at 1320 D street southeast, was born in Stuttgart, Germany, December 2, 1883. He studied in Germany and in the United States before becoming a musician in the old First Engineers Band in 1910. In 1913 he went with the Marine Band and, when he retired Thursday, was clarinet soloist and bass violin soloist.

His retirement was marked by brief ceremonies in the concert hall of Marine Barracks, when testimonials from Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, Marine Corps commandant, were presented.

How he happened to choose two such widely diverse instruments as the clarinet and the bass violin he explains readily enough.

"I took up the clarinet first," he said, "but I love bass instruments."

Marine Uniform Changed to Diaper For Maas Infant

The Marine Corps yesterday enrolled a new recruit.

He is Private Melvin J. Maas, jr., 1-day-old son of Representative Melvin J. Mass, of Minnesota, ranking colonel of Marine Reserve aviation.

Officials of the Quantico base informed the elder Maas that enlistment papers have been filled out for the new private, complete with a draft on the quartermaster for a uniform. It is made of white cloth and safety-pins, rather than the usual blue red trimmings, they added.

Lumber Truckman Wins Race With Police but Loses Trial

Fined $125 and Given 30 Days in Jail On Charges of Speeding, Eluding Officers, Driving on Sidewalk and on Wrong Side

Pitting his two and one-half ton lumber truck against a police scout car Thursday, James E. Jackson, 31, colored, of Germantown, Md., managed to race across the District-Maryland line in time to leave the D. C. police eating his dust.

But winning a hot chase cost him dearly. In Police Court yesterday Judge Walter J Casey found Jackson guilty of five traffic violations, sentenced him to a total of 30 days in jail, and fined him $125.

Policemen A. G. Keene and E. G. Mowr, in their scout car, said they clocked Jackson speeding up Connecticut avenue Thursday at 55 miles an hour (charge No. 1; fine $25, or 30 days). When the police drove up alongside, Jackson swerved into Livingston street and raced away at 50 miles (charge No. 2; $25 or 30 days). When a taxi driver tried to impede Jackson's progress, the truckman ran the cab over the curb and pushed his own car over the sidewalk (charge No. 3; sentence of 10 days in addition to a fine of $25, or 30 days in jail). Cutting back onto the street Jackson drove up the wrong side of the thoroughfare (charge No. 4, sentence of 10 days in addition to another $25 fine, or 30 days). Jackson drove through a stop sign at Forty-first and Livingston (charge No. 5; sentence of 10 days, in addition to a $25 fine, or 30 days).

Jackson crossed the District line ahead of his pursuers, only to be picked up by Montgomery County officers an hour later as he drove his truck into the Bethesda lumberyard at which he works.

On a sixth charge—that he was operating the truck on an expired drivers' license—Jackson asked a jury trial.

Driver Flees After Carrying Victim in Car

Woman Is Injured On New Jersey Avenue; Auto Abandoned

A 55-year-old woman was struck down on a sidewalk last night by an automobile whose driver fled after taking her some distance from the scene. Five other persons were injured in District area traffic.

Mary M. Mason, 55, of 1505 Third street northwest, suffered a broken right shoulder and rib and internal injuries when she was struck by an automobile in the 1100 block of New Jersey avenue northwest. Police said the machine was driven by a colored man who took her to Fifth and W streets northwest and left her there in the automobile. A colored man was later arrested in connection with the case.

Melvin R. Smith, 45, of 511 Seventh street northeast, suffered severe head injuries when his automobile collided with another in the 200 block of Seventh street southeast. Samuel H. Martin, 25, of 225 Fourteenth street northeast, said by police to be driver of the other machine, and William Bradshears, 28, of Ritchie, Md., a passenger, were injured slightly.

Ronald Hays, 5, of 5026 Illinois avenue northwest, was bruised on the head and body when he was struck by an automobile in the 900 block of Hamilton street northwest. Police said the automobile was operated by Ethel M. Redman, 31, of 735 Hamilton street.

Howard White, colored, 13, of Brentwood, Md., was in serious condition at Casualty Hospital after being struck by a truck on Highland avenue in North Brentwood. He suffered head injuries.

70,000 Expected To See $100,000 Santa Anita Today

Winner to Gross $53,000 if All Go Postward Today

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, March 1.—Fourteen candidates were named today to battle it out in the sixth running of Santa Anita's fabulous horse race—the $100,000 added handicap.

Heading the brilliant field was the mighty combination of Seabiscuit and Kayak II. Others entered were Heelfly, Whichcee, Specify, Can't Wait, Ra II, Don Mike, War Plumage, Wedding Call, Hysterical, Viscounty, Royal Crusader and Kantan.

A hush fell over the room at Santa Anita Park as the names of the candidates—gallant Seabiscuit, making his third try for the huge purse; Kayak II, winner of the 1939 event; threatening Heelfly, Whichcee, Don Mike and the others—were dropped into the entry box.

Plant Put in Shape

Tension mounted as the draw for post positions was made, while outside was noise and clamor as work went ahead to put the big, sprawling racing plant in shape for the big day tomorrow.

The sun shone brightly, prospects were good for a clear day and a dry track, and a record throng of more than 70,000 was expected to watch the sixth renewal of this handicap.

Lucky Seabiscuit drew unlucky post position No. 13, but it may not be unlucky for the 7-year-old turf warrior. On the outside, away from trouble, able to move into his own position without interference—that was the attitude veteran turfmen took of his position for the start of the mile and a quarter grind.

Kayak II, Charles S. Howard's other star, drew No. 2, while the two speedburners of the field, Maj. Austin C. Taylor's Whichcee and A. A. Baroni's Specify, got Nos. 7 and 6, respectively. Heelfly, George W. Stratton's dangerous contender, goes from No. 11, with the colt Royal Crusader on the extreme outside and Wedding Call on the rail.

The winning purse will range around $90,000, with the second

Miami, Fla., March 1.—A record field of 18 thoroughbreds, notable only for its size, will answer the call to fame and fortune in the fifth running of the $50,000 added Widener Challenge Cup at Hialeah Park tomorrow.

Although the race lacks a standout performer, it is expected to attract the largest crowd ever to throng this showplace racing plant and to send the day's pari mutuels handle soaring over the million-dollar mark for the first time since the boom days.

With 18 starters, the top prize will total $53,000, largest in the history of the event, and the odds were 7-2 tonight that this windfall would go to Leo J. Marks' Many Stings, which held a short edge in the betting on the basis of his triumph in the McLennan Memorial.

Woof Woof Draws Support

There was a late rush of support to John Hay Whitney's Woof Woof and the 3-year-old colt, youngest entry in the race, which won the $20,000 Flamingo last Saturday, was a 4-to-1 shot to make a "double" of the two richest stakes of Florida racing.

Third choice in the public's favor at 6 to 1 was Marshall Field's Sir Damion, second in the 1939 Widener. The big, bay horse ran out of the money last week in his first start since suffering a leg injury last summer.

Next in the prerace odds were Col. E. Maxwell Howard's The Chief, which would have been the favorite had he not quit in his last two starts; Mrs. Payne Whitney's Day Off and J. B. Partridge's Sandy Boot, at 8 to 1.

Joe W. Brown's Brown King was at 10-1, and James Emery's Dolly Val, 12-1. Only others given a chance by the experts to spring an upset were Isadore Bieber's Confiado, a 20-1 shot, and Herbert M. Woolf's Technician, quoted at 25-1.

Although Many Stings had done nothing notable before, the red bay, 5-year-old gelding was favored be-

Riders Victors, 29 to 23; Tide Wins, 51 to 28

By Bill Burnett.

With a howling mass of 3,500 fans packing Tech gym, Roosevelt and Eastern Highs qualified for the finals of the Interhigh Championship tournament last night with victories over Western and Central, respectively.

Roosevelt, the regular-season leader, started the double-header with a squeaky 29-23 triumph over the Red Raiders, Eastern took its time warming up and issued Central the most one-sided beating any team has suffered in the series, 51-28. The winners clash tonight in the nightcap of a twin bill on the same floor for the 1940 title. Western and Central starting things at 7:30 with the consolation, or third place, rating at stake.

Feature of the bill, other than Western's valiant but unsuccessful attempt to trip the tourney's torrid favorite, was the new scoring record for the year set by Bob (Gun) Custer, Eastern's lanky forward, in the finals.

Custer ripped the cords for 24 points, three better than his own previous mark, set in the Tide's

Armstrong And Garcia In Draw

Eyes of Both Men Cut in Savage Battle; Rivals Stand Toe-to-Toe

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, March 1.—Ceferino Garcia, bolero-punching Filipino, tonight checked Henry Armstrong's bid to become the first fighter ever to have held four championships by holding him to a draw in their ten-round bout for the middleweight title before 30,000 fans.

Armstrong, the little brown man who typifies perpetual motion in the ring, made his bid to become the greatest figure boxing ever has known by trying to knock the middleweight crown off the head of Garcia.

Former kingpin of the featherweight and lightweight ranks and present ruler of the welter division, the squatty Negro spotted his Filipino rival 11½ pounds, height, and strength—everything but a fighting heart.

They squared off for the 10-round battle, with Armstrong as the mild favorite. Odds of 10-8 were around ringside that he would become the only fighter in history to have held world titles in four classes.

In 1938 Armstrong scored a 15-round decision over the Bolo punching Filipino. It was at the welterweight poundage, Garcia's handlers claimed the weight making weakened their contender.

Garcia grew into the middleweight division, defeated Fred Apostoli to gain recognition as champion by the New York and California commissions. He went into action tonight confident in his new weight of reversing the decision of two years ago.

Some 20,000 fans turned out in Gilmore Stadium in clear, fairly mild weather.

Estimates of gate receipts varied from $65,000 to $75,000. An official total was not expected to be available until long after the bout.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Hialeah Park, Fla., March 1.

In the picturesque language of Bob Massey, our Hialeah operative, we are informed that that thing from the Marshall Field barn will take up his 120 pounds tomorrow and buck-jump in the $50,000 Widener Handicap.

POVICH

"They been foolin' with that thing all meeting, but tomorrow they'll let him run for those fifty G's," says Mr. Massey, who took up spelling and recess in school and later dropped spelling. "I seen the boy on him finish on the ear the other day when the colt run back. The money on him was moidered."

Before we go into any more details it may be best to translate Mr. Massey's race-track lingo. That thing from the Marshall Field barn is the good colt, Sir Damion. When Mr. Massey saw the boy on him "finish on the ear" the other day he meant simply that the rider was sitting so far on the horse's head that he was no help whatsoever to his mount.

Bob Massey, like many another racetrack character, never calls a horse by name. It is always "that thing out of the Whatsis barn," or "that thing by Man o' War," or "that good Whoozis filly." It's not exactly an aversion to names, it's easier for the race track habitues to identify a horse by his blood lines or ownership. However, they want no traffic with some of the tongue-twisters that owners pin on their steeds. When Bob Massey and his ilk call such as Inscoelda "that Insco filly," it is merely the line of least resistance.

But getting down to current events, meaning tomorrow's $50,000 Widener, it has all the earmarks of a wide-open betting affair with no War Admiral, no Seabiscuit or no Challedon in the field to hog the bulk of the wagering. The closest thing . . . he's got me talking that way . . . to an outstanding favorite is the Lemar Stock Farm's 5-year-old Many Stings, and he is no less than 3½ to 1 in the overnight entries.

Challedon, of course, was supposed to win this race and it doubtless would have been a mere formality for him, but Challedon is languishing up at Columbia, S. C., where he was snow-bound when he should have been training for tomorrow's Widener.

Challedon's absence hasn't hurt the race in one sense. You couldn't have found 18 owners, who would have thought that their chances of winning were worth the $500 entrance fee if Challedon showed up at Miami. But with Challedon out, owners of handicap horses have become suddenly brave, and the biggest field in the history of the race will go to the post tomorrow.

It's very apt to be the biggest crowd that has ever seen a Widener, too. The operators of the Hialeah track haven't been weeping in their beer over the Miami cold wave. It has been a great break for the track, driving Miami's wintering thousands off the beaches and into Hialeah. Mortimer Mahoney, the mutuel man, estimates that $800,000 will be poured into the machines tomorrow and the track will show a huge profit on the day despite the $50,000 it is tossing to the Widener winner.

"I figure the Marshall Field thing will go on top and buck-jump all the way," Mr. Massey was saying in his appraisal of Sir Damion. "They don't like him so much for the mile and a quarter, but I like him 'cause I seen him stick it out last year to finish second ahead of Sande's good thing (Stagehand).

"The only thing that's scaring me is Howard's horse (The Chief). That fool horse has got all that early speed, and he'll probably try to run Sir Whatsis Name into the ground. If Meade don't take any part of that foolishness on Dominion and runs his race with the horse he ought to go all the way.

"Course I gotta give some of those others a chance. That favorite (Many Stings) looked good winning the McLennan the other day but I don't know if he has too much class. The Pebble (Big Pebble) is better than they rate him and I may not let the price scare me. There's a lotta bums that don't have no right in the race. I figure no more'n 14 is going to the post."

The most romantic thing that could happen in the Widener, incidentally, would be a victory for the favorite, Many Stings. Because that would be a triumph also for Old Mose Shapoff, the trainer who last summer didn't have a horse to train after meeting with a series of reverses. He went back to the Lemar Stock Farm when he was jobless and they entrusted him with Many Stings. Shapoff brought the 5-year-old into winning form for the McLennan last week and off that race he will go to the post as tomorrow's favorite.

Heavy Favorite Bows In Semi-Finals at Ormond Beach

By International News Service

Ormond Beach, Fla., March 1.—Springing the most stunning upset of the season, Elizabeth Hicks, of Long Beach, Calif., today defeated Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, 1-up on the nineteenth green in the semifinals of the annual South Atlantic Women's Golf Championships.

Miss Berg, tournament medalist and topheavy favorite to win another of her numerous titles, started with her customary brilliance and was 3-up at the turn, an advantage she increased to 4-up at the tenth.

Here the California girl began to flash spectacular golf and captured the next two holes, halved the thirteenth and went on to win the next two holes to even the match.

Miss Hicks tomorrow will meet the present national titleholder, Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, Tex., in the final match. The Jameson girl today scored an easy 7 and 6 decision over Mrs. William Hockenjos, of Lake Hopatcong.

Eagles Swamp Quebec Six, 6-2, in Slow Game

Second Place Only 1 Point Away For Locals; 2,200 See D. C. Team Play Sloppily but Win Easily

By Jack Munhall.

The Washington Eagles climbed to within one point of second place in the Eastern Amateur Hockey League last night at Riverside Stadium by defeating the touring Valleyfield Braves, of Quebec, 6 to 2, in a slow match.

The victory, Washington's second in five meetings this season with Old Dominion teams, brought the Eagles' point total to 55. The second-place New York Rovers have 56. One of the smallest crowds of the season, about 2,200 fans, saw the game. M. M. Mahoney, general counselor of Canada, threw out the first puck.

The Eagles, suffering a relapse of form after their brilliant showing against the Baltimore Orioles Tuesday, played sloppily throughout, but they were still far superior to the Braves, who are leading the Canadian Provincial League.

Valleyfield Holds Eagles

It appeared as though the Eagles would win easily in the first three minutes of the match as they controlled the puck and sent wave after wave of attack against the Spring Valley goal.

But the score was deadlocked 1-1 at intermission and the Braves were very much in the running. The Eagles scored at 3:15, Kuntz making his first goal since returning to the line-up after a six-week absence enforced by a broken wrist. He was assisted by Burrage, who was making his sixth straight assist on a Washington goal. The crafty defenseman was credited with an assist on each of the 5 points the Eagles tallied in their tie with the Orioles last week.

The Braves tied the score at 10:52 on a neat shot by Holland Boyer which should have been stopped by Goalie Colvin. Boyer counted on a 25-footer from the left wing corner which slid into the opposite corner of the net.

Eagles Begin to Move

Class began to count in the second period as the Eagles rammed home four goals to shoot into a 5-1 lead. The Burrage-Kuntz combine accounted for the third Washington goal at 5:00, Kuntz registering his second score of the match and Burrage his seventh straight assist.

The Eagles finally made one without Burrage, at 14:50, when Foster on a double pass from Cairns and Partis flicked on the red light to make it 3-1.

Davies authored the Eagles' fourth goal and he did it unassisted at 18:45 after a shot by Covert had bounced off the shins of Goalie Lacelle. Covert also figured in the production of the local's fifth goal, he and Kuntz helping Dewey to a tally at 19:55, just five seconds before the end of the period.

Stancook Named Army Grid Aide

Former West Point Star to Be Assistant To Coach Bill Wood

Columbia, S. C., March 1.—First Lieut. Joseph C. Stancook of the Army's Sixth Division said today that he had been notified of his selection as assistant football coach at the U. S. Military Academy.

STANCOOK

The information came from Capt. William Wood, head coach at West Point. Stancook will report for duty in August.

He was a freshman at Notre Dame in 1930 and received freshman numerals that season. He entered West Point in July, 1931. He was a three-letter man and received the school award of "best athlete" while there. Stancook captained the football team.

Michigan State Beats Temple to End Season

East Lansing, Mich., March 1 (AP).—Michigan State conquered the Temple University basketball team, 44 to 28, here tonight, ending its most successful season in five years with a record of 14 wins in 20 starts.

Maryland U. Bows, 44-32, in Tournament

Raleigh, N. C., March 1 (U.P.).—Duke and North Carolina, seeded first and second, respectively, moved into the final round of the nineteenth annual Southern Conference championship basketball tournament here tonight, taking impressive victories over semifinal opponents.

George Glamack, towering center, led North Carolina to a 43-35 decision over fourth-seeded Wake Forest by tallying 28 points.

Duke, with a fast-passing, accurate-shooting attack, smothered an erractic Maryland five, 44-32, in the other semifinal game.

The two winners will meet tomorrow night for the conference title vacated by Clemson, loser in the opening round to Carolina.

Duke showed a versatile floor game and a deadly basket eye, while Maryland shot wildly throughout the game. Dozens of Maryland shots bounced off the basket rim as the Old Liners attempted unsuccessfully to bring their fast-breaking attack into play.

Duke's Glenn Price, with 11 points, took high scoring honors for the game, but Mock and Allen, the two Duke forwards, were close behind him with 10 points each.

Duke led at the half, 25 to 13.

Glamack scored 10 field goals and 8 free throws for 28 points and individual honors of the game.

Glamack's favorite hook shot was working with disturbing regularity from close under the basket, and the Wake Forest defense was unable to find a way to stop him.

Carolina took an early lead and drew quickly ahead to lead, 27 to 18, at half time. Glamack had scored 18 points halfway through the game, exactly as many as the entire Wake Forest team.

Wake's Deacons began clicking as the second half started and finally tied the score, 33 to 33, with 10 minutes left to play. But Carolina turned on the heat, and as Glamack dropped in two quick ones, began to draw away. Carolina made 8 points before Wake Forest could tally again.

The Wake Forest scoring was evenly divided. Three players—Davis, center, and Forwards Convery and Barnes—scored 8 points each. No Carolina player, except Glamack, got more than 4 points.

Navy Starts Spring Grid Drill Monday

Replacement of Six Seniors to Be Easy Task for Coach Larson

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, March 1.—The unfamiliar thunk of toe on pigskin will bring Navy football fans out of their winter hibernation Monday for the start of the spring training season.

Maj. Emery E. (Swede) Larson will begin his 1940 chores with the job of finding replacements for the half-dozen senior stars who helped to garner that win over Army in his first year as coach.

But the job appeared not to be too tough as the Swede surveyed the grop of eligibles up from the 1939 undefeated Plebe squad. Two of the '39 babes were touted as money-in-the-bank bets for varsity jobs.

Butch Busik, a toe-dancing backfield streak won rave notices from the sportswriters last fall for his work on the babe eleven, and But Zoeller, quite a package of end, would have performed on the varsity last fall if he had been eligible.

And with Capt. Al Bergner, tackle, among the graduates-to-be, the presence of Fats Flatman, 250-pound Clemson transfer, and Foots Donohoe, 220-pounder, wasn't making Larson mad at anybody.

Some 60 varsity candidates were expected to be in suit when the Swede gives the "go" signal Monday.

Oxford-Cambridge Boat Race to Be Resumed Today

London, March 1 (AP).—The Oxford-Cambridge boat race, robbed by the war of the traditional excitement, will be renewed on the Thames tomorrow. Cambridge was the favorite to win the classic that dates back to 1829.

It will be rowed over the mile-and-a-half Henley course instead of the 4¼-mile course between Putney and Mortlake.

Florida Paper Reports Cody Resignation at Florida U.

Head Football Coach Said to Be in Line For Northern Job

By the Associated Press

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., March 1.—The Fort Lauderdale Daily News, published by a member of the State board of control, said today Josh Cody had resigned as athletic director and football coach at the University of Florida.

The News did not directly quote its publisher, R. H. Gore, who recently was appointed to the board which controls Florida's State institutions.

The story said Cody resigned to accept appointment as coach of an unnamed university in a Northern State.

There were reports in recent years of attempts to oust Cody from his post, but the board renewed his contract. It would run normally through the 1940-41 school year.

The News said no successor to Cody had been chosen.

NATS' ROOKIE PARADE

At Orlando Camp

(This is another of a series of sketches on the rookies seeking jobs with the Nats at their Orlando training camp.)

AL EVANS—CATCHER

A fifty-dollar investment in himself has fetched red-headed Al Evans many times that sum already and has placed him squarely in line for a big league catching job in the not-to-distant future.

On a winter day in 1937, 19-year-old Al Evans was intrigued by an advertisement in a baseball weekly which promised a full course of instruction at a baseball school conducted in Florida by Joe Stripp. Tuition was $50. Somehow, he raised the money.

To Orlando came Evans to enroll in Stripp's school. Six weeks later he was graduated with honors for in his pocket was a contract with the Washington Club's Charlotte team in the Piedmont League. Also in his pocket were $75, representing half of the $150 Clark Griffies paid Stripp for recommending the lad as a catcher.

The Nats' investment in Evans has also been fruitful. He stepped directly from high school ball in North Carolina into the second-string catching job at Charlotte. That was in 1938. In 1939, Evans was not only Charlotte's No. 1 catcher but generally recognized as the best catcher in the Piedmont League.

He's in the Nats' training camp now for the third consecutive year and this time he is commanding no little respect. The Washington bosses like his 185-pounds of ruggedness and Clark Griffith on frequent scouting trips to Charlotte last year was impressed with the remarkably improved polish of his catching. They are, to put it bluntly, nuts about his throwing arm. And they think he can hit. He whaled away at a .290 rate for Charlotte, despite the fact he is a dead left field hitter.

Currently he is rated No. 3 on the Nats' catching staff, behind Rick Ferrell and Jake Early, but his definite rating is very much in abeyance. Bucky Harris wants a long look at him in the exhibition games.

He's 22, now, and has no trouble finding a job in the off-season. Then he simply goes back to his dad's farm at Kenly, N. C., and helps with the tobacco crop. He used to be some pumpkins as the catcher for Kenly High School and Oak Ridge Military Academy at Greensboro.

Finnish Benefit Tonight Draws Six Stars in Maki Mile

Cunningham, Venzke Head List at C. U.

7th Annual Event May See Records Broken in 1,000 And 50 Yards

The strongest field of milers ever to compete in a race here will start in the Maki Mile, feature of the Finnish benefit track meet at Catholic University tonight.

Headed by Glenn Cunningham, the field will include Gene Venske, Archie San Romani, Joe McCluskey, Luigi Beccali and Mason Chronister.

All save Maryland's Chronister are nationally known stars and he is one of the most promising of the collegiate milers, having posted a 4:12.5 effort in placing second in the Southern Conference championships recently.

Ranking just behind the Maki Mile in spectator interest are the Rector's 1,000 and the Abbey 50, which also have drawn exceptionally powerful fields. Jim Kehoe, Maryland's sensational half-mile star who defeated both Woodruff and Borican in the Seton Hall Games, is the defending champion in the event and is expected to lower his record of 2:21 established last year.

Other Marks May Fall

New marks also are looked for in the mile and Abbey 50. Tommy Fields, of Maryland, holds the record for the mile, 3:34, and Johnny Lyons, of Catholic University, set the existing 50-yard standard of 5.4 way back in 1932.

Cunningham has drawn the choice pole lane for the mile. Chronister drew the No. 2 position, and Venzke No. 6. In between Cunningham and Venzke in order will be McCluskey, San Romani and Beccali.

Kehoe's chief opposition in the Rector's 1,000 will probably be afforded by Pete Macieski, highly touted Seton Hall runner, although Cliff Muller, of Washington and Lee is also a dangerous contender.

The meet is divided into three sections—intercollegiate, scholastic and A. A. U. The University of Maryland is defending collegiate champion and is favored to repeat. The Terps have entered a well-balanced squad of 25. West Catholic High School, of Philadelphia, will be on hand to defend its scholastic title, but is expected to be sorely pressed by several rivals, especially by Central High of this city.

Schoolboys Race Early

Due to the unusually large number of entries 2 of the 25 events scheduled will be run off this afternoon. The 45-yard high hurdles and the 50-yard dash, both high school races, will be staged at 3 and 3:30 p. m

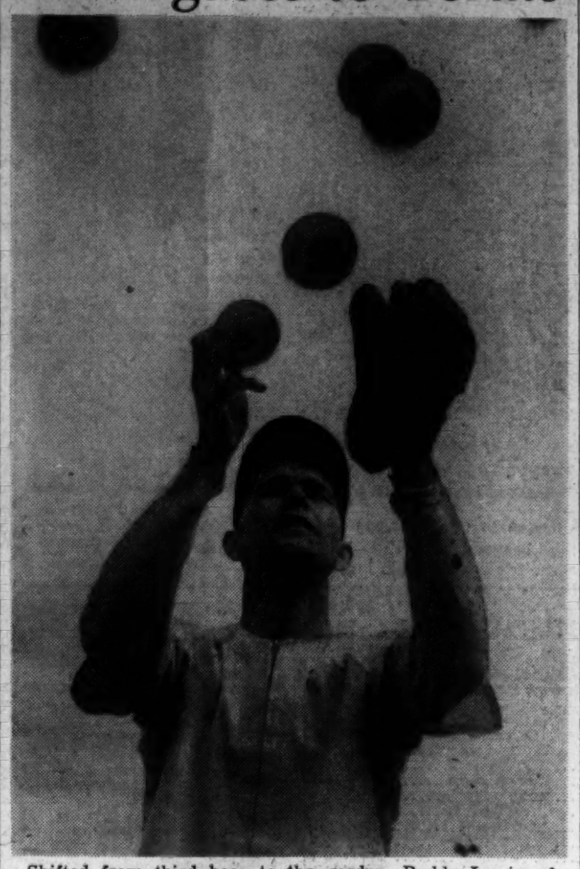

Tonight's program will begin at 7:30. The featured Maki Mile is due to start about 9:30. The Abbey 50 and Rector's 1,000 follow in that order.

Among the star-studded list of scholastic entries the name of Sterling Kehoe, of Bel Air High School, is outstanding. The younger brother of Maryland's hilf-miler, Sterling is one of the most highly regarded middle distance runners in high school. He has mopped up all opposition in this territory at 1,000 yards and tonight will try his luck in the 880.

Griffith's Holdout 'Problems' End; Rookie Shortstop Surprises by Reporting; Ratenski Balks at Offer

By a Staff Correspondent

Orlando, Fla., March 1.—Clark Griffith's biggest pre-season worry, the whereabouts and signing of Rookie Shortstop Jimmy Pofahl, of Minneapolis, was banished tonight when the Minneapolis graduate for whom the Washington ball club paid $40,000 blew into Orlando, went into a conference with Griffith, and agreed to terms.

Pofahl, stocky, blond young shortfielder who batted .302 for the Millers last year and who cost Griffith the services of Outfielder Bobby Estalella, Pitcher Harry Kelley and Shortstop Joe Treshock, together with a bundle of cash, surprised the Nationals' camp by his appearance.

For more than a month Griffith, who never has seen Pofahl, failed to hear from him. Earlier in the winter the Old Fox offered a contract which was spurned by Jimmy. Thinking it over, Griffith dispatched another contract in January and followed by sending a couple of letters. Pofahl, who was married this winter, failed to answer any of them and Griffith this afternoon expressed doubt if the rookie would report.

"I don't know where he is and, furthermore, I don't care," said Griffith. He seemed to be pretty disgusted with the whole business but at 9 o'clock tonight the Old Fox was beaming over the arrival of his expensive recruit and was entertaining him in his hotel room. Object of the entertainment program, of course, was to get his name on a contract.

Pofahl, a right-handed hitter, is supposed to play shortstop this year, with Buddy Lewis moving from third base to the outfield and Cecil Travis shifting from short to third base.

Pofahl's signing ended Griffith's holdout problems because, previously, Catcher Tony Giuliani had agreed to terms.

There is one holdout but he is a minor if amusing character. He is Shortstop Teddy Ratenski, who played with Greenville last year.

"I heard from him," Griffith admitted, "and Ratenski is dissatisfied with terms. I've been in baseball for 53 years and never heard such an explanation as Ratenski gave. He wrote. 'I want more money for a social reason.' Can you beat that?"

Riggs Meets McNeill in Net Finals

By the Associated Press

New York, March. 1.—Bobby Riggs entered the final round of the National Indoor Tennis Tournament today by defeating Frank Froehling, fellow Chicagoan, 6-3, 6-4, 7-5.

He will meet Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, for the championship tomorrow. McNeill entered the title round yesterday.

In the women's division tomorrow's rivals will be Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Brookline, Mass., who entered the final round yesterday, and Pauline Betz, of Los Angeles, who today crushed Gracyn Wheeler, also of Los Angeles, 6-3, 6-0.

Froehling threatened early in the match when he led at 3-1 in the first set after two service breaks. But Riggs tok the next five games for the set and Froehling was subdued thereafter. Miss Wheeler also faded after a 3-3 deadlock in the first set and permitted Miss Betz to win nine successive games, deciding the match.

In the women's doubles, Mrs. Fabyan and Katharine Winthrop, of Boston, lost to Patricia Cumming, of Westfield, N. J., and Louise Raymond, of Scardsdale, N. Y ,6-2, 4-6, 6-4. The victors will face Miss Wheeler and Norma Taubele, of New York, who ousted Miss Betz and Millicent Hirsh, of New York, 6-4, 2-6, 6-2.

Riggs and his Wimbledon titleholder teammate, Elwood T. Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., who are top seeded in the men's doubles had to fight through five sets in their semifinal match to defeat August Ganzenmuller and J. Norman Anderson, of New York, 3-6, 3-6, 6-3, 7-5, 6-2.

St. Paul Beats Howard Five, 52-50

Special Dispatch to The Post

Lawrenceville, Va., March 1.—Howard University's basketball team dissipated a 26-22 halftime lead here tonight and was beaten by St. Paul, 52-50, in an exciting game.

Harry Waters paced the victors' second-half comeback and led scorers of both teams with 22 points.

Manhattan Favored in 4-A Games

Jaspers Should Get Four Firsts; Blozis, Fuller Go Into Action

By the Associated Press

New York, March 1.—The form chart says Manhattan College will hit the bull's-eye tomorrow night when it shoots for its fifth team title in the nineteenth Indoor Track Championships of the Intercollegiate A. A. A. A.

Pete Water's' green-shirted Jaspers, with the aid of a "sleeper," are figured for 23 points on four first places, a fourth and a fifth. They are picked to win the 2-mile relay, in which they consistently have returned the season's fastest times; the high jump with National Champion Artie Byrne, the mile run with Andy Neiding, and the 1,000 with Joe Zeitler, the "sleeper," of the Waters' crew.

Because George Tucknott and Johnny Motzenbecker have not fully recovered from leg injuries, Georgetown University has withdrawn from three events of the nineteenth annual I. C 4-A games at Madison Square Garden tonight.

The Hoyas have canceled their entries in the featured mile relay and also in the 1,000-yard and mile runs.

Georgetown's only representatives, therefore, will be Al Blozis, world's indoor record holder, in the shot put; George Bogan and Morty Alnwick, in the 60-yard dash; the varsity 2-mile relay team of Vinnie Braun, Ken Lyden, Alnwick and Vincent Carnevale, and the freshman sprint medley relay foursome of Jim Fish Peter McAtee, Jack Doolan and Phil Graves.

Neiding isn't the general favorite for the mile. That mantle falls on the shoulders of Sophomore Les MacMitchell, of New York U. But this corner likes the Manhattan boy because he seems the tougher runner, and durability, rather than style, will be essential in the I. C. 4-A scramble.

Princeton appears to have the best chance of breaking the New York College's stranglehold on the team crown. The Tigers should take at least one first, with Anson Perina in the road jump. The national champ hasn't been beaten in two years of I. C. 4-A competition. Ed Burrows, the favorite, might give them another 5-pointer in the 1,000. The form chart gives the Tigers 18 points, one less than N. Y. U., which should cop the mile relay and 600, the latter with Jim Herbert.

Besides Byrnes and Perina, there are two other A. A. U. champions in the huge entry list representing a record total of 33 colleges. They are Al Blozis, Georgetown's 250-pounder, who may break all indoor shot-put records for the third week in a row, and Niles Perkins, of Bowdoin, who is ranked second to Bob Bennett, of Maine, for the 35-pound weight throw.

Frank Fuller, Virginia's record-breaker, in the high hurdles; Barney Ewell, of Penn State, in the sprint, and Tom Lussen, of Yale, in the pole vault, are other strong favorites. Virginia, Tufts, Williams, Army and Temple will be competing in the indoor meet for the first time, and all but Temple should score in one or more of the 13 varsity events.

Little Hoyas Trip Landon By 26 to 24

By virtue of two long shots from midcourt by Georgetown Prep's center, Sport Barrett, in the last minute of the game, the Little Hoyas edged out Landon Prep, 26 to 24, in the latter's gym yesterday.

The game got off to a slow start with Georgetown taking a slight lead, which by half time stood at 15 to 8. In the third period the home club tallied 8 points to the Little Hoyas' 4. The quarter ended 19 to 16 in favor of the visitors.

With the score tied at 22-22 in the waning minutes of the last period, Bebo Perkins put Landon in front with a two-pointer, but the slim lead was short-lived, as Sport Barrett let fly his two long shots to clinch the game.

Paul Baker, high-scoring forward of the hosts, continued to lead his team in that department by accounting for 8 points. Sport Barrett also marked up 8 pints.

Dreel Tech Five Beats American

Special Dispatch to The Post

Philadelphia, March 1.—American University's game last-minute rally fell short here tonight, and the Eagles dropped a 41-to-36 decision to Drexel Tech.

The visitors were behind, 25 to 17, at half, but pulled to within 3 points of a tie with a minute to play. Here, however, Piltz scored for Drexel to give it its ultimate margin.

Entries Pour In for Post Court Tourney

145-Pound, Girls' Classes 'Wide Open;' Play Opens Wednesday

The Heurich Gymnasium will hum with some of the best basketball of a busy season hereabouts starting Wednesday night when the battles begin for the District A. A. U. championships. Entries are pouring in for the annual tournament to be sponsored by The Washington Post. Every indication points to the entry of the city's outstanding teams in the three classes.

The cream of the unlimited division will be in line before the lists close at midnight on Monday night at the Boys Club, 230 C street northwest. In addition to the better-known clubs, a number of teams, hopeful of upsetting elite rivals, are falling in line. The nature of the tournament play, which calls for elimination by a single defeat, gives every club a chance to finish on top and collect The Post Trophy, individual gold medals and the title. As usual, members of the runners-up in each class will receive silver medals.

The James Sprigman Medal, which goes to the leading scorer in the unlimited class, promises to be eagerly sought. Sid Karp, of J. C. C., took down the prize last year with his sensational shooting, although he lacked the number of games of some of the other sharpshooters.

Entries for the 145-pound class have been from strong teams for the most part. The Merrick Boys Club will be in line to defend the title won last year. Merrick had tough sledding most of the way a year ago and observers of the class say the race is wide open.

The absence of Rockville as a team has proven a stimulant to the girls' class. Rockville did not organize this season, which has been the signal for other girls' clubs to grit their collective teeth and prime for the titular battles.

Entry blanks for the tournament can be obtained at The Post sports department, as well as the Washington Boys Club. However, the entries will close at the boys' club.

16th Straight To Armstrong Five, 34-26

Armstrong High School basketball team, city titleholders, defeated Douglass High School of Baltimore, 34 to 26, yesterday in the Armstrong gym for its sixteenth straight victory. A capacity crowd witnessed the game which was for S. A. H. S. Association championship.

The visitors took a 7-4 lead at the quarter. At intermission, Armstrong held a 18-13 margin. The smooth floor work of Capt. Mose Fletcher, of the winners, and his 11 points aided his team greatly. The defensive work of Brice and Philips also helped the winning team.

For the visitors, Milt Burks and Forward Highlett were outstanding, the former scoring 11 points, and the latter accounting for 9.

The Douglass team finished the season with a record of 14 victories and 2 losses, both losses being to Armstrong High.

Star of Visiting St. John's Five

Jim White, high-scoring ace of St. John's University basketball team, which meets George Washington tonight at Eastern High School gym

G. W. U. Five Host Tonight To St. John's

Brilliant Brooklyn Team to Invade; Eastern Gym Scene

The ninth renewal of one of the East's outstanding basketball rivalries will be staged here tonight when George Washington University's crack Colonials will entertain the fast St. John's University of Brooklyn five at the Eastern High gym, starting at 8:30.

Because of the conflict with the interhigh championship series, the game will be played at Eastern and not at Tech, as is customary for G. W.'s home games.

George Washington and St. John's have been battling since 1931 in a steady series of games that has produced brilliant basketball. Tonight's game promises to be typical of former bitter struggles. St. John's again has one of the most successful quints around New York, while George Washington has dominated the local sector and has gone afield to score several noteworthy triumphs.

Records Identical

The teams have identical records; both have won 13 games and lost 4. Each uses the fast break and set-shooting styles of attack, and each employs a tight man-to-man defense.

St. John's, winner of the New York City title last year is a razor-edge second to the unbeaten N. Y. U. team at present. The Redmen recently dropped a 40-to-38 decision to the Violets in what was termed one of the finest games of the year in Madison Square Garden.

High scorer for the visitors and one of the best shots in the East is angular Jim White, a sophomore, whom Reinhart regards as one of the best players he's seen all year. White is flanked by a crew of 6-footers, including Dutch Garfinkle, passer and playmaker supreme, Co-captain Frank Haggerty, a fine under-the-basket man, and John Ahearn, keen shooting forward.

C. U. Freshmen Beaten Again

Saint John's cagers took their second victory of the season over the Catholic University frosh last night, 32-18, with Frank Cady's 11 points leading the attack.

It was the Johnnies' eighth triumph in 20 games to date. They took an early lead and were never behind. Second-best scorer was the Johnnies' Herb Munhall, whose six points beat out the frosh's Stynes by one marker.

G. W. May Stage Games At Riverside

Coach Reinhart Inspects Stadium, Inquiring Of Heat, Seating

Indications that George Washington University may schedule its next year's basketball games at Riverside Stadium were seen yesterday in the inspection of the plant by Head Coach Bill Reinhart and publicity man Johnny Busick.

Reinhart and Busick made inquiries about the new steam blown heat at Riverside and also about its seating capacity. Reinhart seemed please to learn the place would seat about 5,000 for ice hockey. That means, he said, that more than 6,000 could be accommodated for basketball.

Should George Washington decide to play its games at Riverside there is a strong possibility that Georgetown may follow suit and that the two may jointly stage double-headers, bringing here the outstanding teams of the country.

Reinhart has always maintained that he could get games with Oregon, Stanford and others of the major Far Western powers, which play at Madison Square Garden, provided they could be offered an adequate guarantee. Such could not be given them for games to be held at Tech gym, where the Colonials and the Hoyas hold forth now.

Godoy's Manager Sued for $12,000

Los Angeles, March 1 (AP).—Heavyweight Boxer Arturo Godoy, who lasted 15 rounds with Champion Joe Louis recently, found himself involved indirectly in a lawsuit today.

Al Weill, of New York, his manager, was sued for alleged breach of contract by Eddie Mayo, also of New York, who claims he helped Godoy and his wife toward profitable theatrical engagements and was dismissed by Weill.

Weill, through Attorney Milton Black, promptly denied any breach. Mayo's suit asks for $12,000.

Mayo, Tapp Top Amateur Show Tonight

Golden Gloves Stars Clash at Gonzaga; Young Dundee Fights

Gilbert Mayo, pride of the St. Mary's Club, of Alexandria, will risk his Golden Gloves featherweight championship tonight at Gonzaga Hall against Willie Tapp, last year's bantamweight titleholder, in a match headlining a ten-bout amateur show under the auspices of the St. Aloysius' Church Boosters A. C.

Frankie Mann, veteran Washington promoter and matchmaker, is staging the card—his second amateur venture of the season.

Mayo and Tapp not only are battling for the 1940 Golden Gloves title, but for the right to represent the District in the Eastern championships opening Monday in New York.

They were to have met in the finals a few weeks ago at the Arena, but due to the death of Mayo's brother the bout was postponed.

The Mayo-Tapp match and the nine supporting bouts will be fought in a new 24-foot ring. The old ring was only 16 feet.

Glove Champs Battle

Three other Golden Gloves champions who will fight in the New York tournament are on tonight's card. They are Danny Petro, flyweight, who faces Jim Bowen, Virginia titleholder; Jackie Wadsworth, bantamweight, who opposes Bill Desin, of Richmond, winner of 12 straight fights, and Leo Marcopulos, lightweight, who engages Frank Sullivan, of Richmond.

Three novice Golden Gloves champions will fight. Ray Landers, lightweight winner, will meet Lew Dundee, son of the former world's welterweight king, Joe, who has promised Promoter Mann to second his boy. Charlie Schneider, featherweight, declared the outstanding novice in the tournament, meets Johnny Brosigan, of Pete's.

Of particular interest is the appearance of big Chester Norris, A. A. U. heavyweight king, who takes on George Kuntz, 205-pound York, Pa., amateur champion.

The first bout goes on at 8:30. The Gonzaga Hall is located at 47 I street northwest.

The matches follow:

112 POUNDS—Danny Petro (Golden Gloves champion) vs. Jim Bowen (Richmond).
118 POUNDS—Jackie Wadsworth (Golden Gloves champion) vs. Bill Desin (Richmond).
126 POUNDS—Charlie Schneider (Golden Gloves novice champion) vs. Johnny Brosigan (Pete's A. C.)
118 POUNDS—Charley Petro (Police Club No. 5) vs. Pete Kearns (Merrick).
135 POUNDS—Leo Marcopulos (Golden Gloves champion) vs. Frank Sullivan (Richmond).
135 POUNDS—Ray Landers (Golden Gloves novice champion) vs. Lew Dundee (Baltimore).
160 POUNDS—Jack Cranford (A. A. U. champion) vs. Ray Kanary (Richmond).
147 POUNDS—Allen Shreve (Golden Gloves novice champion) vs. Bill Manley (Baltimore).
HEAVYWEIGHT—Chester Morris (A. A. U. champion) vs. George Kuntz (York, Pa.).
126 POUNDS—Gilbert Mayo (Golden Gloves champion) vs. Willie Tapp (1939 Golden Gloves bantamweight champion).

Phelps Vocational Defeat Baltimoreans

Phelps Vocational School avenged a previous setback at the hands of Dunbar High School, of Baltimore, yesterday by winning 40 to 29 at the Phelps gym. Dunbar scored in Baltimore earlier in the year, 39 to 22.

George Marlowe, of the winners, was high point scorer of the game with 17 points.

Latin Ringmen Prove Puzzle To Coach of Charlotte Hall

Five of Nine Mittmen Are of Spanish Extraction; Co-Captains of Team Are Cubans

Charlotte Hall, Md., March 1.—Any unemployed tutor of Spanish desirous of obtaining work doubtless can find same by contacting Bill Shores, boxing coach at the Charlotte Hall Military Academy.

Shores, an alert, intelligent fellow from the University of North Carolina where he was Southern Conference 135-pound champion, has been losing sleep trying to dope out some way of coaching all of this year's Charlotte Hall boxers effectively.

For, out of nine mittmen who are working out under Shores' tutelage, five of them are of Spanish extraction and hail from either Cuba or Panama. Thus, when the going becomes heated in sparring sessions, Shores either has to call a halt to proceedings or listen to five excited Latins jabbering at each other in Spanish while swinging rights and lefts.

Fighting for Shores are warriors with such classic Latin names as Carlos Ferrer, Abelardo Marquez, Roberto Rife and Ceferino Fernandez, all from Cuba, and Jose Guizado, from Panama City, Panama. The Cadet coach has all of them listed in a notebook so that he can keep things straight.

Adding to Shores' woe is the fact that the cocaptains of the team this year are Ferrer and Marquez, both seasoned veterans. Both boys speak and understand English almost as well as the Americans on the squad, but, when there is a vital problem to be considered concerning the team, both fall back upon their native tongue while Shores tears his hair.

With his Pan-American squad due to face the Western Maryland frosh in a match at Westminster, Md., tomorrow night, Shores now is casting about for an interpreter to stay in the Cadet's corner—just in case.

"Next year," says Shores, "I'm going to be set for them. They won't catch me unprepared again. Yessir, I'll be ready next season—I'm going to tutor in Spanish this summer."

Early Settler and One Jest Win in Silks of Winfrey Stable

$6.10 Choice, $15.90 Shot Are Victors

Jockey Flinchum Becomes Ill and Cancels Mounts After 4th Event

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., March 1.—W. C. Winfrey's white and green silks, worn by Eddie Arcaro, leading veteran rider of the meeting, were much in evidence here today. They flashed to victory in the fifth race, over the turf course, when Early Settler rewarded favorite players; then, in the next race, One Jest flaunted them to a hard-earned triumph in the featured Black Helen Handicap.

One Jest was one of the outsiders in the seven-horse field, paying $15.90 for $2. She ran the mile and a furlong in 1:50 3-5 and held a length and a half margin over John C. Clark's Pretty Pet. Parscout, from the W. E. Boeing Stable, and the favorite, finished third, a half length farther back. Flying Lill, a close second choice in the field of fillies and mares, was fourth.

Has Racing Luck

Early Settler, a $6.10 for $2 favorite, won the mile-and-a-sixteenth turf course event, aided by racing luck. The veteran came through on the inside at the home turn when Cerisse 3d ran out and carried several contenders with her. The latter nosed out Bucking, which saved ground along with Early Settler, for the place. Cerisse 3d raced Counterpoise into the ground and was in front when she made her wide turn. Early Settler, last in the early stages, then shot into the lead and easily held sway to the end, scoring by three lengths.

Apprentice Jack Flinchum fell victim to an upset stomach after the fourth race and canceled his remaining mounts on the program.

Earl Steffen, the veteran jockey known for his exceptional ability at riding 2-year-olds, once again performed his favorite feat as the card opened with a 3-furlong test for maiden juveniles. The talented booter was astride the first-time starter Within, which set the pace and registered by a length at $11.80 for $2. The time was 0:34 3-5.

Merry Flag Second

Merry Flag headed Jimson Belle out of second money, while Easy Goer ran over the forward running Kinky, the favorite, to gain fourth position.

Taking the lead over 13 other youngsters just after the start, Within bounded into a wide lead. Steffen kept the Epithet filly under pressure to the end to stave off the fast-finishing Merry Flag.

PLOWSHARE was forced wide on the stretch turn, but closed with determination and won going away. ZAYIN displayed good speed, bore out turning into the stretch, but continued gamely to hold GOOSEBERRY safe. The latter moved up stoutly while saving ground in the final quarter. SATIATION weakened in the stretch run.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles (on the turf). Purse, $1,300; Grade C. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:10. Off 4:12½. Winner, W. C. EARLY SETTLER saved ground, moved up fast midway around the turn and, taking command entering the stretch, was kept under steady pressure to the end. CERISSE III forced the pace, bore out in the final furlong, but outlasted BUCKING. The latter, under restraint early, came with a belated rush through the stretch. MY PORTER finished well.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $3,000; handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:41½. Off 4:42. Winner, W. C. ONE JEST raced FLYING LILL into submission rounding the lower turn and drew clear at the furlong and was strongly ridden out. FLYING LILL weakened in the last furlong.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:11. Off at once. Winner, W. E. Collins' ch. g. UP AND UP, steadily restrained early, moved up with determination when called upon and shook off his opposition in the final furlong. Selections at Hialeah Park

Dear Al:

My Wireless Windbag Contest is going over big. If you didn't see the announcement yesterday, I'm offering a season badge to the Bowie meeting (tax paid) for the reader who sends in the most clever four lines of rhyme on Art Brown, of WOL. The contest closes on March 20. The boys, and the girls, too, hopped right on the thing, and I received several last night. Here's one: "Art Brown thinks he's a wise guy, Believes that he's flying high, But he's due for a big fall, Bowie will open and get it all." Let's have them, but remember, keep them clean. Confusion, brother of Confucius, didn't do so well as a pinch-hitter, so the old boy is going to the plate for himself. Confucius say: "Big Pebble (in Widener Cup) will get the rocks and Whichcee (Santa Anita Handicap) runs for me." I was riding to Bowie with a Washington business man some years ago. We were unable to find a seat on the train. Here's what he had to say about racing in the District: "I helped close up Bennings, yet here I am standing up to bet my money in Maryland. The only difference I can see in the situation is that Washington continues to supply the betting at the Maryland tracks, but the money goes into Baltimore banks instead of ours." Mr. Big and Mr. Big can laugh off that breeding and owning, but it is those mutual windows that take them to the tracks so often. And they are no strangers to those win lines, either. I wonder what Sun Beau, now in retirement, thinks about Seabiscuit taking a shot at his all-time, money-winning record today. I'd like to see him win it, but I agree with Confucius that Whichcee has a whale of a chance. I know that no sprinter has ever won the hundred grand. However, Whichcee is in comparatively light and may not be caught. In the Widener, I prefer Many Stings. BILL.

First race—Cruising has plenty of speed in those old legs and looks like the winner of the day's opener. Gold Band can better that last considerably and is dangerous. Sunphantom for the minor award.

Second race—Hard Way has been rested since those efforts earlier in the winter. Has plenty of speed but has been tossing in the sponge in the late stages. Could forget to stop today. Boss Hoss is the right one on the cold dope. Bino won easily last out.

Third race—Balloter seems suited by the long route in this and I'm going to string along. Memory Book has some class edge on the field and will score if able to handle the top one. Broad Vision should be in the pay circle.

Fourth race—Uvalde broke the ice last out and may come right back with another winning effort. Lady Bethyl and Braving Danger to take care of the place and show.

Fifth race—Flying Lee promises to do a lot of hustling in this company and Jockey Alfred Robertson should help. White Hot and Zevson will battle it out if the top one makes mistakes.

Sixth race—Many Stings has shown enough to warrant selection in the Widener. He has the stretch punch and will be around when the sprinters are dying. Brown King could be underestimated even in this company. He has been brought along slowly and is dangerous. Technician could be the third one.

Seventh race—Mont Kau could be the right one in this event. He has the stretch ability and should run over the field at the end. Multitude and Titalator for the other money positions.

Eighth race—I prefer White Ginger, Blanco Sweep and Red Rogue in the day's finale.

Many Stings Choice In Widener Today

cause he defeated most of the Widener candidates in the McLennan and will be carrying only 109 pounds, 11 less than top-weighted Sir Damion, tomorrow.

The impost also played an important part in the support being shown Woof Woof. Although the Whitney colt will be running out of his class, the 103 pounds he will have to tote, coupled with his impressive Flamingo triumph, were to his credit.

With speed horses like Woof Woof, Sir Damion and The Chief in the field and a fast track for the one-and-one-quarter-mile spin almost a certainty, the time of the race was expected to be near the record 2:01 4-5 by Mantagna and Columbians.

Also named for the race were Inscoelda, which will run in an entry with Technician, Mrs. E. L. Martin's Supreme Sir, Circle M. Ranch's Big Pebble, Paul Kelley's entry of Cardinalis and Memory Book, River Divide Farm's High Fidelity, Mrs. Marie Evans' Shot Put and Philip Schwartz's Napper Tandy.

The bugle call summoning the horses to the starting gate for the big race will be sounded at 4:30 p. m. (E. S. T.).

Farr Cancels Bout On Doctor's Orders

London, March 1 (AP).—Tommy Farr, Welsh heavyweight who once fought Champion Joe Louis, canceled a bout with Louis Verbereen today on his doctor's orders.

"My future as a boxer depends on the doctor's decision," said Farr, whose eyes have been troubling him.

finisher earning $20,000, the third $10,000, and the fourth $5,000.

Favored in the betting rings was the entry of the 'Biscuit and Kayak II, followed next by Whichcee, Heelfly, Specify and Can't Wait. They were considered the class of the handicap, although big Don Mike, the Argentine importation of Bing Crosby and Lin Howard, was well regarded by many observers.

Owner Howard stuck by his latest jockey assignments—Johnny (Red) Pollard on Seabiscuit and Leon (Buddy) Haas on Kayak II. Other assignments likewise remained the same, with Basil James on Whichee, Harry Richards on Specify, Georgie Woolf on Heelfly, Johnny Longden on Can't Wait, Ralph Neves on Viscounty, and Lester Balaski on Don Mike.

Coupled in the pari-mutuel betting will be the Howard entry, Stratton's Heelfly and Hysterical, and the Binglin's Don Mike and Ra II, another Argentine.

There was a possibility 13 would accept the issue, with Hysterical scratched if the track remains fast.

High Weight was handed Seabiscuit. He carries 130 pounds in his drive to pass Sun Beau's all-time money winning record. Kayak II is next at 129; Ra II, off his South American campaigns, drew 118; Specify, 116, and Whichee and Heelfly, 114. Low weight of 100 went to Kantan and Royal Crusader.

Post time for the big race was set for 4:20 p. m. (7:20 p. m., E. S. T.)

Hill Threatens To Quit If Firm Drops 'Bonus'

Am. Tobacco Head Warns Shareholders Against Proposal

New York, March 1 (AP).—George Washington Hill, president of American Tobacco Co. for the last 14 years, has threatened to quit the company if stockholders at the annual meeting April 3 changed the concern's plan of "incentive compensation" under which top officers since 1912 have shared in profits.

Hill's remuneration by the company last year was $420,300.

Urging holders at the meeting to defeat the proposal of Lewis D. Gilbert, a holder of 80 shares, to change the compensation plan so as to limit top officers' participation in profits, Hill said:

"My association with the American Tobacco Co. has been my life work. I have know no other. I want to know no other. But obviously I cannot, with selfrespect, continue in the company if a decision is made which I must regard as a repudiation of proved successful policies—a change in the terms of employment of those who have built and are building this business with me."

Net Is $26,427,934

Hill's plea to holders to defeat the Gilbert proposal accompanied American Tobacco's annual report, which disclosed 1939 net profits were $26,427,934 after charges, equal after preferred dividends to $5.12 a share on the common and "B" stock, compared with $25,435,643 or $4.89 a share on the common and "B" in 1938.

Gilbert, an outspoken critic of many large corporations and sometimes referred to as "the Nation's No. 1 minority stockholder," was described by Hill as "a small shareholder in each of some 50 companies" who "concededly makes it a practice to attend annual meetings of these companies for the avowed purpose of forwarding proposals to regulate their affairs in accordance with certain views and philosophies which he entertains."

Gilbert's proposal on compensation changes for American Tobacco would limit the amount of extra compensation Hill and five vice presidents could take from eranings.

"Short-Sighted" Policy

"He proposes," said Hill, "to do away with 'incentive compensation' altogether on earnings up to $23,719,332.50. And to prohibit it on earnings over $27,719,332.50."

Commented Hill: "To require management to earn upwards of nearly $24,000,000 a year before it can expect to share in the profits it produces would be short-sighted and dangerous."

Hill added "the proposal that the management should be prohibited from any share in profits it might earn for the stockholders in excess of $27,719,832.50 plainly doesn't make sense, since it says to the management: 'You are not to have any increasing incentive to make the company's earnings more than this figure.'"

Hill also urged holders to defeat a second Gilbert proposal that the company's independent public auditors be elected by the stockholders rather than by the directors.

T. W. A. Expands Spring Schedule

Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc., yesterday announced new spring schedules which will include a total of 18,650,826 passenger seat miles, compared with 14,666,685 seat miles operated in March of last year.

V. P. Conroy, vice president in charge of traffic, said T. W. A. expected to operate 1,103,774 flying miles during March, compared to 960,877 miles operated in March, 1939. He added that this "marks the first time in T. W. A.'s history that we have operated more than a million miles on a year-round basis."

With applications for additional routes and service now pending before the CAA, the biggest expansion in the airline's history is planned for this summer, Conroy said, leading up to the introduction of T. W. A.'s new fleet of 33-passenger "stratoliners" which probably will go into service in June.

Real Estate Bond Prices Decline in February

Real estate bond prices at the close of February were 1 per cent ahead of the 1939 close, according to the Amott-Baker Bulletin. The average price of a $1,000 bond is now $317 compared to $314 on December 31, 1939. During February this average suffered a decline of $1 per $1,000.

Sixty-four of the 200 issues used as the basis for the average increased in price, 77 closed at the same level, while 59 showed lower bids at the end of the month.

Fifth District Sales Heavier In January

Store Volume Up 9%, Auto Registrations Increase 20%

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., March 1.—A "much higher level of activity" in trade and industry during the first six weeks of 1940 as compared with the similar 1939 period was reported today in the monthly review of financial and business conditions issued by the Federal Reserve bank for the fifth district.

The fifth district comprises Maryland, Washington, D. C.; Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and part of West Virginia.

"A continuation of activity in retail lines attests a district improvement in consumer purchasing power over a year ago," the report stated.

"Sales reported by 31 department stores in the fifth district for January were 9 per cent above the volumes of sales in the same stores in January last year, and 39 retail furniture stores indicated an increase of 8 per cent in this year's business.

"Reports from 184 wholesale firms also give an increase of 8 per cent in sales this January over January a year ago.

"New automobiles registered in January, 1940, in spite of severe weather and roads which were practically closed the final week of the month, increased 28 per cent over registrations in January, 1939."

The report said that "The only distinctly unfavorable comparsion with January last year is in construction, both building permits and contracts awarded declining materially this year." There was a 51 per cent decline in building permits, and 14 per cent decrease in contracts awarded.

"However, this year's figures are compared to unusually, high figures for January, 1939," the review continued, "and in addition severe weather this year mitigated against formation of construction plans.

Business failures declined 15 per cent from the number of insolvencies reported in January, 1939, and cotton consumption in fifth district mills were at a record level for that month, exceeding January, 1939 consumption by 20 per cent.

U. S. Store Sales Up 5 Per Cent

The Federal Reserve Board at Washington estimated yesterday that department stores sales in the week ended February 24 were 5 per cent larger than in the corresponding week last year.

In the week ended February 17 sales had been 2 per cent above last year, and for the four weeks ended February 24, averaged 4 per cent above the similar period of 1939.

By Federal reserve districts comparisons of sales in the week ended February 24 with a year ago, follow:

Increases—New York, 1; Philadelphia, 11; Cleveland, 17; Richmond, 8; Atlanta, 5; Chicago, 10; St. Louis, 9, and Dallas, 8 per cent.

Decreases—Boston, 11; Kansas City, 2, and San Francisco, 4 per cent.

No figures were given for the Minneapolis District.

Foreign Buying In U. S. Climbs To Boom Rate

$200,000,000 a Month Being Spent Here, N. Y. Reserve Says

By the Associated Press

New York, March 1.—The nations of the world, in the feverish war activity and armament building race, now are buying goods and war supplies in the United States faster than they are shipping gold here.

Moreover, foreign spending during the past four months in this country has aggregated around four-fifths of a billion dollars, averaging at least $200,000,000 monthly.

These facts were disclosed today in the monthly review of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

The bank reported that in the four weeks ended February 28 the United States gold stock, fed by imports, climbed another $234,000,000, an average weekly gain of $58,000,000.

Gold came here from widely scattered countries—from Norway to South Africa and from Canada to Australia.

The bank said:

"In spite of the large sales of gold to the Treasury, most of which were for foreign official accounts, foreign central bank balances in the Reserve banks showed a net reduction of $26,000,000 during this period, indicating that foreign expenditures here have been exceeding foreign sales of gold to this country.

"While some transfers of funds to this country for the account of nonresidents of the countries at war have been reported, it seems fair to assume that a large part of the proceeds of the gold imports and the reduction in foreign central bank balances in this country was actually spent in this country by foreigners, including foreign governments.

"The figures for the past month, together with similar figures for other recent months, suggest the rate of foreign spending in the United States well above that indicated by the reported excess of merchandise exports over imports.

"In the past four months foreign spending here appears to have averaged at least $200,000,000 a month."

Week's Offerings Hit $140,561,651; Mostly Refunding

New York, March 1 (AP).—Public offerings of new securities during the week ended yesterday totaled $140,562,651, the second largest weekly volume since the beginning of the war, Poor's Publishing Co. reported today.

Included in the total was a $105,000,000 refunding program of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, the biggest industrial bond financing ever undertaken under the Securities and Exchange Act.

Only 2 per cent of the week's new issues for the purpose of obtaining new capital. The remainder represented the refunding of existing debts.

Selling of Utility Shares Follows SEC Integration Orders; Foreign Loans Feature Bond Trading

New York, March 1.—Selling in the utilities followed action by the Securities and Exchange Commission today in ordering integration of Electric Bond & Share and Engineer's Public Service: and weakness in commodity sections also was unsettling to securities. At the end of the day stocks were shaded in most sections. Steels and coppers, while comparatively inactive, lost most ground while foods and oils were steadiest.

The 100-stock barometer gave up 0.17 point while the Independent Aviation Index dropped 0.45 point. Stock exchange volume was just over the 600,000-share mark.

Sterling, French and Belgian francs were firm in foreign exchange dealings, the last named united reflecting news of rising industrial activity throughout Belgium as a result of the war. Wheat ran into selling based on favorable weather conditions and ended 2⅛ to 2⅝ cents lower.

In bonds, the buoyancy of Scandinavians was a feature, bidders being influenced by passage of the Congressional resolution empowering the export-import bank to make loans to Finland, Norway and Sweden, and the coinciding announcement that $20,000,000 for Finland and smaller amounts for Norway and Sweden will be advanced. Corporate issues were inclined to be dull, unsold parts of recent offerings having a tendency to hold back the domestic section.

Power Group Lower

While selling in power shares was confined largely to low-priced issues, a large proportion of the 42 lows recorded in the day's trading were included in the power group. Commonwealth & Southern, a dollar stock, led the active list on 27,300 shares at a ⅛ discount. Of the other six power stocks in the 15 most actives, only one, United Gas Improvement, was priced above $10 a share. New lows were recorded by Engineers Public Service, Brooklyn Union Gas, American & Foreign Power issues, Columbia Gas, North American, National Power & Light, U. G. I., Electric Power & Light stocks and some others.

Quite a few stocks in other sections equaled old lows or established new bottoms, including Radio Corporation, Chesapeake & Ohio, Homestake Mining, Cerro de Pasco, Socony-Vacuum, Dome Mines and Commercial Solvents. American Tobacco issues sold off on overnight publication of its favorable earnings for 1939 together with a management statement supporting the "incentive compensation" system in effect for many years with respect to the five top officers.

Steels Hesitant

Steels were doubtless affected by news from Birmingham and some other centers of a further decline in output activities. Many traders had been encouraged by trade reports of a rise in both domestic and foreign orders, notably resumed buying by the automotive industry. Steel common was off nearly a point at the close but Bethlehem recorded only a fractional loss. Action of McKeesport Tin Plate and Electric Auto-Lite were watched because these companies are among those experiencing early 1940 labor trouble. Neither was active, McKeesport losing a large fraction and Auto-Lite advancing the better part of a point.

Activity was noticeable in some of the coal stocks following unofficial reports of imminent price changes in bituminous as well as a larger export demand, particularly for Scandinavia. Italy has been reported recently as a prospective buyer of American coal following the shutting off the Ferman source by the British blockade.

Bond Trading Quiet

Listed bonds were quiet today, with points of strength apparent here and there owing to such circumstances as the new Export-Import Bank authority to lend $100,000,000 to foreign countries. Scandinavian issues promptly improved, and a few other foreign dollar bonds also reflected buying. United States Treasury loans were firm, but the domestic list of corporation bonds disclosed irregularity. Turnover was $4,960,000.

Foreign Loans Generally Up

Finland 6s were not traded, while Helsinki 6½s gained ½ point. Norwegian and Danish bonds felt the impact of the changed international picture produced by our official lending policy, the advances ranging from 1 to 3 points. Belgian and Italian loans were dull, while bonds of countries engaged in the larger European war were soft. Argentines were in demand among the Latin-Americans.

R. C. A. Profits Rise in Year To $8,082,811

Annual Report Hints Big Screen Television Soon Will Be Here

New York, March 1 (AP).—There are about 45,000,000 radio receiving sets in American homes and automobiles, the highest ever by far, and a total larger than all the rest of the world combined.

This was disclosed today in the annual report of the Radio Corporation of America which also stated technological developments held out the hope that large screen television projection would soon be an accomplishment.

The corporation reported for 1939 net profit of $8,082,811, equal to 35 cents a common share after provision for preferred dividends. This compared with $7,412,072, or 30 cents a common share in 1938.

Consolidated gross income of all the companies in the RCA group totaled $110,494,398, an increase of $10,526,288.

Maj. Gen. James G. Harbord, chairman, said in his letter to stockholders: "The progress made by the corporation cannot be measured alone by increases in its income and profits. There must also be taken into account the strengthened position of the corporation in the industry, the increase in the number of workers it employs, and the constant technical advances it is making in research and pioneering to improve existing services."

The report showed the monthly average number of employes of RCA and its companies in 1939 was 20,716, compared with 18,046 in 1938. At the year-end the total was 22,913, against 19,177 a year earlier.

The report said a new television development "now technically ready for public service" was "improved projection of large screen television images of a size and clarity suitable for theater presentation."

"Large screen television will permit the showing of current events and other programs to large audiences," the report said.

Cotton Breaks On Heavy Sales From Abroad

By the Associated Press

New York, March 1.—Foreign interests unleashed a flood of selling orders in cotton futures today as overseas markets dropped. Southern selling contributed to pressure which left the list 11 to 16 points lower.

The decline was one of the most severe since cotton started climbing out of the late January slide.

At that, brokers said, the move was contested all along the way by trade and mill interests, who bought vigorously as a result of heightened activity in textile markets.

New York price premiums over Bombay widened about $1 a bale due to a sharp drop in the Indion market, which led Bombay brokers to take advantage of price differences. Total sales from Bombay and Liverpool together were estimated at from 15,000 to 20,000 bales.

Bad news to the market were reports England might seek further raw cotton supplies from Brazil rather than the United States to conserve dollar balances.

Cottonseed Oil

Sales volume in the cottonseed oil futures market dropped to the lowest since the first of the year today. Prices declined 1 to 4 points on turnover of 13 contracts.

With speculative interest not much more than flickering, offerings were attracted by the sharp decline in wheat, which offset influence of steadier lard and hog markets.

May closed 7.02 bid, July 7.12, September 7.16 bid.

Crude oil was quoted nominally at 6 cents a pound in the Southwest and valley and 5¾-5⅞ in Texas.

Wheat Touches Fortnight Low On 2-Cent Dip

Private Crop Report, Forecast of Rain Cause Selling

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 1.—Wheat values dropped more than 2 cents today to the lowest quotations in two weeks due partly to selling inspired by forecast of grain belt rain and the March private crop report.

The downturn wiped away all but a fraction of the 7-cent gain scored since Friday, February 16. This was the advance which puzzled Government farm experts according to statements issued yesterday in which they cited bearish market factors including large carryovers and abnormally high domestic prices compared with world prices.

At the end of six months of war in Europe, Chicago wheat shows an advance of about 32 cents a bushel. Winnipeg prices have risen 27 cents.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press

London, March 1.—Fresh support for kaffirs contrasted with a sharp decline in domestic rails in an uneven stock market today. A disappointing dividend announcement unsettled the rail shares. Oils and coppers were firmly maintained, but industrial leaders inclined to lower levels when support lagged and profit taking appeared. British government bonds ended with mixed changes. French sterling loans were adversely affected by Finance Minister Reynaud's speech.

Paris—Bourse quotations milled around in a fractional range today as traders cashed profits after recent gains. The government's firm stand on economic problems appeared discounted in yesterday's rise. Rentes closed unchanged to 80 centimes lower.

Amsterdam—Share prices shifted uncertainly today as the bourse weighed hints of increased war activity. Dutch issues were steady to firm in the bond market.

Liverpool—Cotton futures closed unchanged to 9 points lower today in sympathy with a sharp drop at Bombay.

Four Army Clashes Close Middies' Season

Cagers, Fencers, Swimmers and Gymnasts In Final Engagements; Annapolis Five, With 11 Losses, Given Little Chance

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, March 1.—Winter sports will be packed in mothballs at the Naval Academy after tomorrow when the Midshipmen tangle with Army's Cadets in four season windup contests.

Tension at the academy hit violin-string pitch as the Tars prepared to entertain the Greyleg swimming and gymnasium teams. The Middie fencers and the basketball team traveled to the Point for their annual civil wars.

Coach Johnny Wilson's cagers were given only an outside chance to topple the soldiers, coached by Valentine (Dutch) Lentz, Annapolis athlete who was St. John's College coach for many years.

Won Final Pair

The Middies salvaged something of their disastrous season by taking their two final home games for a season record of 3 wins and 11 losses. The Lentzmen were licked only four times.

Navy's fencers, holders of most of the intercollegiate trophies and undefeated in three years, were touted to repeated in the pentagonals tomorrow when they engage Army, Harvard, Yale and Princeton swordsmen in a round-robin meet.

Louis Mang, Navy gymnasium coach, was prepared to pick up the shattered bits of the world rope climb record when Cadet R. W. Mabee meets Stan Ellison, Navy, in the event. Each is a world record holder, Mabee in the 20-foot hoist and Ellison on the 25-foot rope.

Audrey Thrift Rolls 155, Aids Record Game

Shaw & Shaw Team Has 581 at Arcadia; Sweeps at Takoma

A new all-time league record game of 581 featured action last night in the Independent Ladies League at the Arcadia Alleys. Audrey Thrift was the heroine of the new mark that went to the Shaw & Shaw team. She contributed a 155 game and had a set of 360. Despite the big game, Shaw & Shaw did not carry off the team honors. Those went to Galliher & Huguely with 1,591.

In the Interstate Commerce Commission League, Lee Ham, of Valuations, turned in 147. Paul Albus, of Traffics, had a 367 set. Disbursing won team highs with 567 and 1,628.

TAKOMA

The interest of pinmen will focus today on the Takoma Park alleys for the rolling of the sixth annual Dutch Sherbahn Handicap Sweepstakes, honoring the pioneer pinman. The first block is scheduled the second block in shifts at 7 and 9 p. m.

LUCKY STRIKE

Bill Jamison won the Navy Yard League Sweepstakes. He rolled 402 with a 34-pin handicap in the colors of Sight No. 2. Joe Erdman was second with 403, with 30 handicap. Hugh Crawley had the best scratch set of 391, and his 10-pin handicap placed him third.

Billy LaBille's 152 game aided Manor No. 1 in the Country Club League to win two games. Arthur Urban had the best set of 393.

Riders Win, 29-23; Central Routed

recent defeat of Woodrow Wilson. Ten field goals and four fouls points the rangy star rammed in the ring.

Custer's stellar performance, as a matter of fact, kept the last half of the twin bill from being a dud. He was taken out soon after the last period started, with 19 points to his credit, but fans yelled for him until Coach Johnny MacBride sent him back into action. His mates "fed" him the ball in a continuous stream, but he was still passing it back and taking only his legitimate shots as the game ended.

The Eastern victory climaxed one of the finest comebacks ever made by a public school squad. Loser of three series games and forced into a playoff for a tourney berth, the Tide looked again like the champ of '37, '38 and '39 as it romped to victory.

In the first two quarters Central retained a fine chance of justifying its position as second-place finisher in the regular series. After one quarter it trailed but 8-5 and at intermission it was behind only 21-16. Then began a deluge of Custer goals that threw the Mount Pleasanters out of contention for good.

Five points the Blue tallied in the third session as Eastern went into a 36-21 lead with 15. The last session saw the winners register 15 again while Central took 7.

Eastern Not Worried

For the first time Central's cross between a zone and man-to-man defense didn't worry its antagonist after the first half. And the Blue's shots, wild at best, were rimming the basket when they came anywhere close. Sam Di Blasi turned in 10 points for second-high scoring honors of the game, despite his teams' heavy loss. He was easily the star of the losers' floor game as well.

Victor over Western by a 29-26 count once before this year, Roosevelt was put to the acid test to stay in competition. The Raiders started off like a flash to grab a 15-9 lead at the first quarter. In the second period, however, only 1 point went to their credit as the Riders knotted the count at 16-16.

The first time in the game Roosevelt was ahead came after 5½ minutes of the third quarter when Dick Goodman tallied the first points of the period on a lay-up shot. Western's Irving Schenker tied it at 18-18, but the first of two fast shots by Tom Robertson a few seconds later gave the Riders a lead they never lost. Going into the last quarter it was 23-18 in their favor.

Western Is Close

The best Western could manage was a 25-23 deficit in the last quarter. George West's two goals and Ernie Travis' one would up a low-scoring final period.

With the Raider's Jake Hilleary shadowing his every move, Hymie Perlo came out with a scant 5 points for his lowest performance of the season. Top honors went to Travis with 9 points. Jimmy Karas, Western forward, who taillied 8 straight points in the first period, wound up the game with that same total. He was bottled completely in the final three quarters.

Brewers End Season Tonight In Philadelphia

Before an expected crowd of 10,000 persons the co-leading Washington Heurich Brewers and Philadelphia Sphas wil close their regulation American Professional Basketball League season tonight in a doubleheader at Convention Hall in Philadelphia.

The Brewers will meet the Baltimore Clippers at 9 o'clock and the Sphas will play the New York Jewels about 10:30. In the event the Brewers and Sphas both win they will be matched in a play-off game to decide the league championship. This game would not interfere with the annual championship play-off series.

Meanwhile, here preparations are being made to accommodate a capacity crowd tomorrow afternoon for the opener of the championship series which will bring together Washington and the Troy-Celtics. The play-off series is being brought here for the first time and Heurich's seating capacity wil be increased to 1,000.

17 Teams Seek Franchises in Hockey League

Seventeen teams are weighing the advisability of applying for franchises in the Eastern Amateur Hockey League next season, it has been learned from Phil Thompson, secretary of the circuit which now numbers six clubs.

Among the teams showing interest are Pittsburgh, Hershey, Syracuse, Springfield, Boston and Albany. Hershey and Pittsburgh are former members of the E. A. H. L., while Pittsburgh, Syracuse and Springfield now belong to the International-American League.

Boston and Albany, according to S. G. Loeffler, owner of the Washington Eagles, are certain to be added to the league next year and Springfield also is expected to join.

Should present plans work out the league may be divided into two sections—Northern and Southern—with six clubs apiece. Each section would play its own schedule and make two swings around the circuit. At the end of the regular season a play-off would be staged for the championship

Contract Bridge

Charles Goren and young John R. Crawford reached a nice spade slam through subtle bidding inferences on the hand in today's box. Their opponents were Travers LeGros and Cecil Head, Yale College Club star. Crawford's only doubt about a slam lay in his two losing diamonds, so he chose to bid diamonds, hoping to prevent a lead in the suit. LeGros quickly doubled to indicate where the diamond strength really lay, and Goren after a little consideration redoubled.

Goren, by redoubling, told his partner he held the diamond king and could stop the second lead of the suit. It had to be the diamond king, explained Goren, not the ace, which might induce Crawford to bid seven, because he would have shown any aces he held in his second response to the two bid. In other words, had Goren held the ace of diamonds he would have bid four diamonds over three spades.

LeGros opened the ten of clubs, and Crawford was able to win an extra trick. He took the club with the ace in his hand, leaving the club of jack as an entry. He played one round of spades, felling West's jack. He cashed the ace of hearts and entered dummy with a low spade lead to the eight. He played a heart back and trumped. He led another low spade to dummy's nine and trumped another heart on the return, establishing dummy's jack and ten. He played his five of clubs to his jack, threw off his two diamonds on two hearts and claimed the remainder of the tricks on spades and clubs.

Have you ever wondered what the folks who make WJSV run look like? Frankly, I didn't think you had, as I personally often find it difficult to work up much interest along those lines. But whether you'd like to see 'em or not, you can tomorrow in The Post.

For The Post and WJSV have dreampt up a lovely eight-page rotogravure section with WJSV's power rise to 50,000 watts. The story (as far as it is printable) of WJSV is told in the pictures. So get your copies early—plenty of pretty girls, lots of lovely equipment and some of the most harassed looking males you have ever seen.

Remember, there will be no advance in prices, so get your paper early. Do not show it to children under 12, however, and keep it away from invalids.

There's a lull that precedes the storm hovering over WJSV at the moment. Thursday the boys and girls of the "CBS Radio Revue" at the Earle mingled with some of our better people in an informal cocktail party that was the prelude to "WJSV Week." But starting tomorrow "WJSV Week" gets going and the sounds of revelry by night will become part and parcel of our town.

Col. Roscoe Turner, chief pilot of CBS's "Sky Blazers," is a candidate for the title of longest-distance commuter in radio. Turner, famed speed flier and holder of the world's record in closed course flying for 10 miles, commutes regularly to New York from Indianapolis for his Saturday night show. Owner of two speedy monoplanes, Turner anticipates trips from points even farther from New York than the Indiana capital. "So I'm grooming my planes for a try at some new speed records this spring," he says.

Chapter 16

AS THE AFTERNOON wore away, they lived the years of their life over again. Cary and Lynne from the time of their first meeting, until this, their first child was brought into Lynne's room at the hospital. They were seeing the tiny blanketed figure again, and feeling their love for each other reach out and encompass their baby.

Lynne reproached herself for all that had drawn them apart. If only she could live the last year over again! With Dulcie and Cary, jr., and Cary tearing over the great lawns in one of their mad scrambling games. But she had chosen, and now Dulcie was being taken away.

The doctor waited in an outer room for a little while. Then he gently touched Cary's shoulder and asked him to take Lynne away.

Cary half carried Lynne from the room.

Toward the end, Dulcie called for them both. "Daddy is home, Mums, to stay?"

"Yes, Dulcie."

The little face lit up with a smile, and then it was over.

The nurse touched Brenda on the shoulder. "Won't you come up and lie down? You must be made comfortable for the night."

Back to Her Loneliness

"Thank you, but I won't stay. If there is anything I can do, won't you let me know?" Brenda could not bear to see either Cary or Lynne tonight or tomorrow.

She drove back to her apartment. Her own troubles seemed far away. If Cary and Lynne could only be together again the rest of their lives, they would find happiness after their suffering had lost its poignancy. She was fiercely glad for them. Now she would never go away with Cary. It was better this way!

She called Mary, but she had already heard about Dulcie. The girl's voice was jerky and Brenda knew that she was crying.

"Brenda, you had a caller at the office this afternoon," she said. "It was Pixie Tremaine, your husband's sister."

Brenda repeated the name. "Pixie?" She wondered why Pixie should want to see her, and how Pixie even knew she was here!

Brenda would not see Pixie that week, and she could not bring herself to go see Cary and Lynne. She felt ill, and spent most of her time in bed in her hotel room. She dreaded to see Alan's sister. Pixie would not be satisfied with any half explanation of why she had remained here instead of going back to Brazil as she had planned.

Early the following week, Pixie came to the hotel to see her. Brenda was pale and looked ill. Pixie was wearing a fetching suit, and looked very gay until she saw how changed Brenda was looking.

"Brenda, for heaven's sake! You've been ill! And why haven't you come out home instead of burying yourself here? Mom and Dad are having one grand fit about it. That's a fine way to treat your family!"

Brenda smiled a her. "You see, Pixie, I'd hoped that you wouldn't know that I had stayed. Alan had to go back to his old mine," she smiled, courageously. "So I stayed on here a little while. I haven't called or gone out, because I'm so busy at the office. Besides, there's going to be a nephew, after a while, and I've had to shop and sew, you know!"

Pixie Makes a Promise

"Of course, I had heard, Brenda. And we're so thrilled. Mother wants you to pack your bags immediately —or sooner."

"I—I can't, Pixie."

"You what? Can't? What makes you say a thing like that, Brenda Tremaine?"

Brenda stared at her. "Have a cigarette?" she offered the case to her. "Oh Pixie, do be a good sport. You know I must have something to occupy my time. I am not going to impose on your family. I think you're grand, but I think I'd better not come, just the same."

Pixie had more heart than to try to uncover Brenda's secret. If Alan had been crazy enough to hurt her he would have to suffer the consequences. She could ask when Brenda heard from Alan. Or she could ask if her brother were coming back while she was in the hospital. But she would not.

So Pixie left, her mission unaccomplished. Brenda was moodier than ever after she had left. She would not tell Alan's family just yet. No need for them to worry.

The next day, her letter to Alan was returned undelivered. She cried over it, knowing that Alan must be far in the interior where communication would not reach him.

The days dragged by. It helped after she was able to go back to the office. She wondered if Cary really needed her now, or if he were merely keeping her on to be kind to her.

She knew the doctor wondered about her. He had asked about Alan the last time she went into his office.

Brenda attempted to explain that her husband was required to go back to Brazil, and if the kindly doctor guessed more than that, he kept his thoughts to himself.

Cary Winship was so considerate, so kind, to Brenda that she thought afterward that she would have been utterly alone without him. Brenda would not go out to teas or parties. She could not bear the thoughts of them. Sometimes she and Mary ate dinner together in the evenings.

After a few weeks, Brenda moved into an apartment, securing one that would be large enough to bring the baby to when she came back from the hospital.

The Baby Arrives

Cary came into her office several times during the day to talk with her about their work, but obviously to try to cheer her.

Somehow the time passed and a few days before she was to enter the hospital, Brenda made her reservations. At the last, Cary had been very anxious over her. He felt keenly his own part in it all. That it was because of Brenda's helping him that Alan had gone back alone. He had tried to contact Alan, but in vain.

Brenda was fiercely glad that there was to be a child, at least she would have that much of Alan.

The nurse brought the tiny replica of Alan to her the first morning and Brenda's eyes flooded with tears. She held her little son to her and wept until the nurse grew fearful and took the baby back to its crib in the nursery.

After that things were better for Brenda. She grew strong enough to leave the hospital on schedule. She had already established her maid, the Swedish Marta, as nurse in the apartment. Marta had been overjoyed to come back and work again for her, and to take care of the baby, Alan, jr.

Pixie came to the apartment one day after Brenda returned from the hospital. There had been many large packages from the Tremaines. The baby's room was overstocked with gifts from its adoring grandparents and aunt.

Pixie Is Pleased

Pixie regarded Alan, jr., wonderingly. "I thought they all looked alike, Brenda, but I'll admit this child has something. Call it personality or whatever!"

Brenda laughingly said, "He's a darling, isn't he, Pixie? I don't think I could live without him."

They stood looking down at him as he lay in his crib. His eyes were very blue. As blue as Alan's. His fuzzy yellow hair curled low on his forehead. Even his little fist is shaped like Alan's, Brenda had told herself.

"You're looking well, Brenda," Pixie said. But Brenda knew it was a question, rather than a statement.

She knew that she was not looking well. There were too many things haunting her.

Just before she left, Pixie said, "Brenda, let's be truthful about this. Alan was back and left in a huff, didn't he?"

Brenda nodded. "You'd find it out sooner or later, so I may as well tell you. But I didn't want you writing to him about the baby, Pixie. I felt that it was unfair to him to tie him to responsibilities unless he cares to come to me without them. I have tried to get in touch with him but have had no success."

She reached for Pixie's hand imploringly. "Please don't write him about the baby. Alan made his choice. I tried to explain. There's more to it than you know, Pixie, but I love Alan better than life itself and he does not know that. If I tried to tell him, he would not believe me."

"Alan had a bad experience with Margot. I can understand that he would not let himself be too hurt again," Pixie said. "And I promise, Brenda." She kissed her quickly and went out.

Pixie had her own ideas as to why Alan had been angry. He was jealous of Brenda's work. He had not wanted her to come back and work for Cary. That much she guessed, but she was never to know all of the story.

Cary and Lynne came to see her and the baby. Lynne brought Alan, jr., a beautiful silk carriage robe. She held the baby in her arms for a few moments. Her eyes held an expression that they were never to lose again.

"He's a darling, Brenda. I know you must be very happy over him," Lynne said softly to her as they went to get her wraps when they were ready to leave.

Cary had not told Lynne of Alan. Brenda knew that. So all that she could say was, "Yes, very happy, Lynne."

Lynne kissed her as she went out. "You must come and see us, Brenda. Like old times, you know," her voice caught on the words.

"Yes, I shall be happy to do so. Like old times, excepting that I'll bring Alan, jr.," she smiled.

Cary and Lynne were both older and yet they knew a deeper happiness than when she had first known them.

Startling News

The week following, Brenda was idly glancing at the travel notes in the society column. Suddenly one name stood out from all of the rest. Margot Alexander. She looked at it again, but the words ran together on the page, so that she had to open her eyes very wide to see them.

Margot Alexander was flying to Rio de Janeiro. From there she would join a cruise. Among the other guests was the name of Alan Tremaine.

Brenda's heart stopped beating. Then it started up a slow pounding that half suffocated her. Why should Margot Alexander go on a cruise where Alan was to be, unless—— It simply did not make sense.

Alan had talked of Margot one night, and Brenda had felt a slow burning hatred for this girl who had caused him so much suffering. The paper tore between her fingers, why, why should Margot Alexander go?

Alan's Shock

Alan had returned from the new mine. The work there was progressing splendidly. By now the airport had been laid out and planes could land near the great mine. He was prouder of this new work than any that he had accomplished before.

In the beginning, after he had gone on without Brenda, leaving her speeding back to Rio, he thought he could not bear the loneliness. But with grim determination he had carried on with his work. He had given his marriage most of his thoughts at night when he could not sleep. Then, when Brenda was not there, he could see everything with a clearer vision.

The work that he was to supervise had been finished two weeks earlier than he had anticipated, and jubilantly he started back to Brenda.

All the way he felt that he needed the sight of her once more to reassure himself that he must go on with only part of her love.

Later, when he reached the city and drove to the apartment, he could not believe at first that she was gone. He had secured a passkey from the janitor, opened the door with an uneasy feeling. The place had an air of being unoccupied for a long time. Dust lay thick upon the tables, although Brenda had provided for them to be cleaned weekly.

Searching for Brenda

He was at first amazed that she was not there, then he feared that something had happened to her. The caretaker had told him that she had gone back to America weeks ago, but intended returning shortly. She had received a message to clean and air the apartment thoroughly.

Alan could think only one thing. He went about the apartment for an hour or so, opening the closets and seeing the familiar dresses. It was cold back in the States, and here she had left her sheer summer clothes, white linens, pastel-shaded silks and big-brimmed hats, all carefully put away from dust. Alan picked up a shoe out of the bag and held it, running his hand across the soft leather.

He opened the door of the studio. On the easel there stood the picture of the caravan that she had sketched one day on the trail. Alan studied it closely. She had caught an amazing likeness of himself, he saw.

Suddenly he was galvanized into action. He called the airways office, even as Brenda had herself done. A little later, alhough he was weary from his long trip back, he began feverishly to repack his things. Here he would need a whole change of wardrobe. He called in the maid and had his winter things packed, ready to be shipped later in case he cabled for them.

He took only a few things in the baggage that he was allowed on board the clipper.

All of this he was remembering the second day back from his last trip into Brazil. Now he could feel something besides the frenzy of knowing that Brenda had gone back to Cary. At first he had wanted to end everything. But that was an impossible cowardly way to leave things.

He had come back to the apartment; but he knew now that he could not remain here. Not with Brenda's things about to remind him that she had once been with him every hour for a few happy months.
